'Pete the Satan' charged in Bollacker death

by JOHN MAES

Des Plaines police charged a Chicago man yesterday in the shotgun slaying of Richard Bollacker.

Police identified the man as Peter Mukite, 21, of 1823 Haddon. He also goes by "Pete the Satan." He was charged with murder and arrested outside his home on a Des Plaines warrant by Area 5 homicide in Chicago. Police said they also found a 12-gauge shotgun, believed to be the murder weapon.

Three other persons are wanted in connection with the murder. Police identified them as Richard "Dicky" Del Moro (no age available); John Murphy, 20, and a 16-year-old girl from Oak Park. No addresses were given.

THE MURDER victim, Richard Bollacker, 21, was found shot in the head and right arm at close range about 1 a.m. Thursday in the Grand Forest Preserve area in Des Plaines about 1,000 feet east of Rand Road and some 75 feet north of Ballard Road.

Police found the body after Bollacker's girlfriend, Cindy Graf, 16, who was beaten by the killers, flagged down a passing motorist on Ballard who took her to Illinois State Police headquarters in Des Plaines.

The girl, who had been living at Incentives Inc., 2424 Dempster St. in Des Plaines, a psychological treatment center, was taken to Holy Family Hospital where she was reported in fair condition after suffering head, face and wrist lacerations.

ARMED GUARDS were placed around the hospital while the search for the remaining suspects, acquaintances of the couple, continued.

Police said Bollacker's killers had fired a shotgun blast at the girl, but missed. The girl was then beaten with an unknown object by the attackers when they ran out of ammunition and was apparently left for dead. The killers reportedly fled the scene in a rented car.

She was able to muster enough strength, however, to go to the road and hail a passing car, police said. Miss Graf, an orphan, had lived in Oak Park and moved to the Des Plaines center in May. One of the suspects being sought by police reportedly lives in Oak Park.

BOLLACKER HAD been a member of a new west side Chicago street gang known as the Playboys.

There were reports that Bollacker, his killers and the girl were involved in a love triangle.

Miss Graf told police she was riding in a car with Bollacker and three other men late Wednesday night. An argument started, the car stopped on Ballard Road and the two were forced into the woods.

Two blasts were fired at Bollacker while the third missed the girl.

SPOKESMEN AT Incentive Inc. said Miss Graf called in around 10:30 p.m. Wednesday saying she was with Bollacker and would be returning late because they were having car trouble.

Bollacker moved to a Chicago apartment following his discharge from the Army last year.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Bollacker of 22 W. 255 Buena Vista Dr., Glen Ellyn, did not know where their son worked at the time of his death, but said he held various jobs since his discharge.

THE BODY OF Richard Bollacker lay in a wooded area about 75 feet north of Ballard Road (1) while his girl friend, Cindy Graf, dazed and beaten, hailed a passing motorist near Rand Road and Ballard. The motorist alerted State Police at their Des Plaines headquarters (2) who took the girl in. Cindy lives less than a mile from the murder scene at Incentives (3), a psychological treatment center in Des Plaines.

Cindy and Rich knew assailants

A young girl sits in a hospital room at Holy Family Hospital. Her room is under guard. Her calls are screened. Her visitors consist of policemen searching for murder clues.

Cindy Graf, 16, was beaten and left for dead early Thursday morning. The man or men who attacked her had earlier shot her boyfriend, Richard Bollacker, 21, to death in the heavily wooded area near Rand and Ballard roads.

Cindy and "Rich" knew their assailants. The three men and 16-year-old girl who allegedly were with the couple Thursday night were their friends.

The men, including Rich, were members of the Playboy street gang who cruise the Central Avenue Division Street area of Chicago's near west side.

Cindy and the girl also knew each other; both had dated Rich.

RICH'S PARENTS, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Bollacker, stood in the doorway of the modest wood and brick split level home in Glen Ellyn talking about the short life of their oldest child.

They knew little of what happened during the night. Mrs. Bollacker's brother phoned the family about 5 a.m. after police received his number from Cindy and notified him of the shooting.

"The police haven't told us much. There are certain things they told us not to say because it might hinder their investigation," said a tired Mrs. Bollacker.

They wondered why this happened to their son — a chess nut, a car enthusiast who graduated from Proviso East High School in Maywood and joined the Army in July, 1970.

Rich turned 21 in February and moved into a rented room in Chicago to be closer to his job — one of several he had in the area since his discharge from the service.

THE BOLLACKERS said Rich met Cindy through the 16-year-old girl who was with them Thursday night.

Apparently Rich picked Cindy up early Thursday evening for a date, as he had done other times.

Cindy is a resident of Incentives, Inc., a not-for-profit private psychological treatment center at 2424 Dempster St., Des Plaines.

Dr. Jeannine Gavin, director of Incentives, described Cindy: "She's not a drug addict and she had no great psychological problems . . . she's a good girl."

Cindy came to Incentives in May when the aunt she was living with decided it would be better for both of them if she left their Oak Park home.

Cindy's father had died of a heart attack. Her mother died of cancer while Cindy cared for her.

She was supposed to be placed in a Park Ridge home for girls but was sent to Incentives until there was an opening.

"CINDY WANTED to stay at Incentives until she turned 18," Dr. Gavin said. "She was trying to get permission from her guardian to live here and go to Maine East High School. She liked the atmosphere here and was working on the kinds of problems any young girl would face in her situation."

"She's never had any problem here, even when she was with those boys," she continued. "She'd invite them in and they'd play ping pong or games. The boys were never any trouble either."

Cindy had permission to go out with Rich Thursday. "We've never had prob-

Northwest keeps tight abortion policy

by KURT BAER

Doctors at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights will not be allowed to perform abortion on demand.

The hospital's board of directors has voted to continue the present policy of allowing abortions only in cases where the mother's life or health are threatened, it was announced yesterday.

In a tightly worded statement, hospital president Malcolm MacCoun said that "careful consideration was given to the possibility of liberalizing the conditions under which abortion might be performed as made permissible by recent U. S. Supreme Court ruling.

"The board's decision to continue the present policy was heavily influenced by the need to conserve the resources of the hospital for programs for which there are pressing needs. It was further influenced by the inability of the Illinois General Assembly to replace the former statute which was not consistent with the Supreme Court's ruling," the statement said.

THE HOSPITAL board's decision had not been communicated officially to the medical staff as of yesterday afternoon, MacCoun said. He would not speculate on how the decision would be received by members of the staff.

At an April 18 meeting, doctors at Northwest voted 38-34 in favor of changing the hospital policy to permit abortion on demand. There are approximately 170 doctors on the medical staff.

MacCoun would not say what the exact vote of the board of directors was, but he did say the group had deliberated the question for about 45 minutes at its regular meeting Monday night. Thre is one woman on the 21-member board.

He said it was "only the press of other business" that kept the hospital from releasing Monday night's decision before yesterday.

"All decisions are subject to review," he said, "if and when conditions justify."

IF THE STATE adopts new legislation regulating conditions under which abortions can be performed, the hospital would "have to see what the character of such legislation is" before deciding whether to reconsider the hospital policy, MacCoun said.

A state House committee has approved a series of bills that would spell out guidelines for legal abortions and provide state regulation of abortion facilities.

Uncertainty over how many abortions the hospital would be called on to perform if it liberalized its regulations was an important factor in the board's decision, MacCoun said.

"Nobody at this point can determine what that load would be. The quantity is strictly an unknown," he said.

He said the hospital has been "pressed" under existing programs to keep up with the growing demand for surgical facilities and staff.

THE HOSPITAL board first formally considered a change in abortion policy at a meeting in May. At that time, the decision was made to delay a final judgment until more facts could be gathered.

Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge is reported still studying the question of abortion on demand.

Three Roman Catholic hospitals in the area — Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines, Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village, and Resurrection Hospital in Park Ridge — have said they will follow the Catholic Church's dicta against abortions.

The market

Some end-of-quarter buying by institutions helped send stocks solidly higher in slow trading on the New York Stock Exchange. The Dow Jones industrial average shot up 0.01 to 894.64, with most of the gain coming in the last two hours. The average of 30 blue chips has risen 25.50 points in the last three sessions. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index gained 1.07 to 104.69. The average price of a NYSE common share advanced 38 cents. Advances led declines, 874 to 517 among 1,747 issues traded.

Former committeeman Stavros

The man who holds the power in Wheeling

Copyright, 1973, by Paddock Publications, The Herald

By ROGER CAPETTINI

James "Jimmy" Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman and the "buckstopper" of Wheeling politics for the past 15 years, today remains the most powerful force in Wheeling politics, government and business.

Herald reporters, investigating suspected political corruption in the Northwest suburban village, have learned Stavros was listed in two county offices at the same time in the early and mid-1960s and earlier, resigned from another governmental job under pressure.

Herald reporters also have learned from sources close to a federal grand jury investigation of alleged corruption in the village that federal investigators are trying to define from what base Stavros derives his influence.

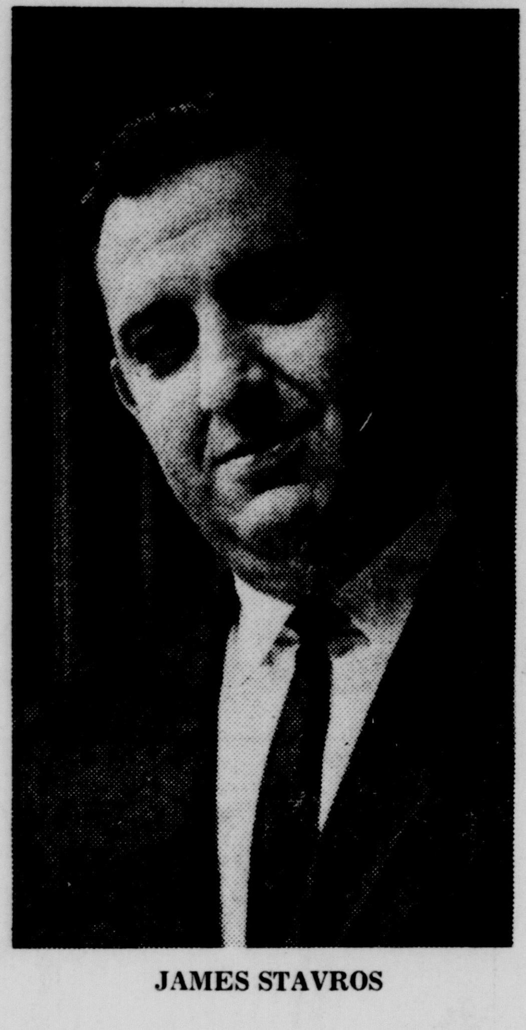
SINCE 1957, when Stavros grabbed the reins of the Wheeling Township Democratic organization, governmental, political and electoral controversies stopped when they reached his desk.

Stavros is a reminder of the "old school" concept of Democratic party politics, featuring patronage, political favors and clout. And today the Village of Wheeling — all that is left of Stavros' realm of power — remains the bastion of "old school" politics among North and Northwest suburban Cook County communities.

The 42-year-old Stavros, who now lives in a $100,000 home in unincorporated Northbrook, has been a politician ever since he entered the political arena as a high school student in 1948, when he worked as an assistant precinct captain.

THE YOUNGEST of eight children born on a north Buffalo Grove farm of Greek immigrant parents, Stavros was a star athlete at Arlington High School and for two years played professional baseball in the White Sox farm system.

After a back injury from an auto accident ended his baseball careeer, Stavros came home to Wheeling Township and resumed his work as assistant precinct captain. In 1956 — at age 25 — he ran for state representative from the old sixth district, finishing third in a field of 12 candidates. He soon became a fullfledged precinct captain, and in 1958 challenged the rule of township committeeman Jack Clark of Arlington Heights.



JAMES STAVROS

Backed by a number of precinct captains upset by a devastating defeat in 1956, Stavros, at age 28, became the youngest committeeman ever elected in Democratic Party politics.

Making good on his promise to strengthen the party, Stavros felt strong enough by 1961 to expand his political influence and successfully backed candidates in Wheeling municipal elections. By 1962 he had doubled the Democrats' township votes, cutting Republican majorities of 4 to 1 and 3 to 1 to 2 to 1.

IN 1965 HIS village slate whipped the GOP-sponsored candidates by a 3 to 1 margin.

Following his primary victory in 1958 Stavros expanded his horizons once again, going on the payroll of the patronage filled Metroplitan Sanitary District (MSD), where he worked as chief investigator for the legal department.

Stavros' job of investigating accident and injury claims ended suddenly in 1962, however, when it was learned he also owned a construction business in Libertyville. Stavros resigned from the district, reportedly, after another employe was fired by MSD Supt. Vinton Bacon because of a similar dual employment situation.

REAR VIEW of the $100,000 home of James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic Committeeman and still the most powerful man in Wheeling politics and government. The home is located in the fashionable Citation Lake Estates, near Northbrook.

In 1962, according to Stavros, he joined the staff of newly elected County Board Pres. Seymour Simon, a maverick Democrat who soon became the unofficial mentor for his young aide from Wheeling.

SIMON, INCIDENTALLY, has a request for a cable television franchise still pending before the Wheeling Village Board.

As an investigator for Simon, Stavros once told the Herald he investigated all complaints received at Simon's office. "I investigate complaints of floods, needed road repairs, sewers backing up, zoning squabbles, drainage and many, many others," Stavros said in March, 1966.

Cook County payroll records, however, show Stavros was employed from February, 1963 to December, 1966 with the county highway department as administrative assistant, grade five. The records also show he worked in the land acquisition and condemnation section of the highway department and was paid $917 a month.

It is possible Stavros was paid out of highway department funds, but actually worked for Simon.

Stavros lost his county job in 1966 when Simon was dumped by the Democratic slatemaking committee when he sought renomination to run for a second term as county board president. Almost simultaneously, Stavros reportedly became ill — presumably from an ulcer he said he had been "carrying around for the past seven years."

IN THE NEXT 11 months, Stavros found himself in a hospital on four different occasions, until finally, in November 1967, he announced he could no longer "keep up the pace," and turned the leadership reins of the township organization over to James McCabe, an Arlington Heights attorney.

Stavros was only 37 years old at the time, and although he had enjoyed mild political success, was disappointed he was forced to quit before he could achieve one of his major goals — to win a major elective office.

But even as he retired, Stavros still exercised his influence, naming McCabe as his successor at a meeting of township precinct captains.

Dissension at the meeting raised the ire of Stavros, however, when Don Norman, an Arlington Heights attorney and deputy township committeeman, charged that McCabe's appointment had been "railroaded" through before the meeting was held.

AFTER McCABE'S appointment was approved by a 65 to 2 vote, Stavros blasted the pair of dissenters. "I recruited you and converted you from a Republican," he told Norman. "You can't please everybody, but loyalty is important to an organization."

He continued, "This isn't a stacked meeting and when I meet with the chairman (Chicago Mayor Richard Daley) this whole matter will be resolved." Supporting Stavros at the time were State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights; Juvenile Court Judge Walter Dahl of Arlington Heights; and then Circuit Court Magistrate Robert Buckley of Arlington Heights, now a circuit court judge.

Judge Dahl said at the meeting, "It's Jim's wish that McCabe follow him so I think that's what we ought to do."

Since his official resignation, Stavros has chosen to stay out of the limelight, apparently exercising his influence quietly and behind the scenes.

He has many friends, and allies, however, in key spots in government and business. His brother, August is president of the Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank.

STAVROS' COUSIN Nick Phillips works as a planner for the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals. He and Charles Petrungaro have applied to the village for rezoning and permission to build an 80-unit apartment complex on an 11-acre parcel at 628 McHenry Rd., Wheeling.

The village board is expected to approve the request despite a negative recommendation from the North Cook County Soil and Water Conservation District because almost three of the 11 acres lie in a flood plain.

Bill Beiber, director of biilding and zoning for the village has said the property no longer is in the flood plain.

Board approval of the plans also will allow floor space, lot sizes and parking space below village standards because Phillips and Petrungaro have told the board the units will be occupied by "senior citizens."

Officials 'shook down' businessmen

by LYNN ASINOF

A Herald team of investigative reporters has learned that some Wheeling officials have applied pressure to several small businesses in the village to get payoffs or contracts for work.

According to some businessmen, some village officials use the building and zoning codes to cause delays until the businessmen are willing to pay off.

Current disclosures regarding alleged misdoings in Wheeling governmental offices does not mean every village official is implicated. Instead, it appears as if several, but not all, holders of local government jobs and offices are the focus of the current federal investigation.

THE HERALD will not use the names of local businessmen pending the current federal investigation under way involving Wheeling village government. Herald reporters have been delving into Wheeling governmental practices for the past six months and have turned over all information to federal agencies.

One businessman reported that his building permits were held up more than six months because he was not willing to make under-the-table payoffs to members of certain village departments.

He said he learned that a Wheeling resident close to village government wanted to purchase his land, and he said the permit delays were designed to force him to sell his property.

The businessman said he finally got his permits when he contacted someone close to village government about the delays. "One day I just got a call saying the permits were ready," he said.

WHEN CONTACTED Wednesday, the owner said he would not offer any comment on the advice of his attorney. He said he will provide further information when more people come forward about pressure applied to their businesses.

A second businessman, who handles local business transactions, said he has been involved in several cases where pressure has been applied through delayed building permits or mysteriously complicated zoning procedures.

He said in one case, a businessman had to hire a lawyer with village connections before he could get building permits to remodel his business.

He said other businesses he has dealt with have found themselves in the midst of zoning technicalities until they agreed to pay off various village officials.

ANOTHER BUSINESSMAN who refused to pay off said he was harassed by various village inspections and issued numerous building code violations.

Most of the businessmen contacted said they were never directly approached about a payoff. They said, however, that word eventually filtered down to them that a payoff would make their problems and delays suddenly disappear.

The majority of businessmen contacted said they were also pressured to contract with certain local firms for their plumbing, sign, and other building work.

Local homeowners who have sought hookups with the village water and sewer system have also reported that certain local plumbers and contractors were strongly recommended. In fact, one homeowner said he was told a Wheeling plumber and contractor would have to handle any hook-up to the water lines.

Several businessmen contacted by Herald investigators said they knew of many cases where pressure was applied through permit delays and zoning hassles. They said, however, they could not afford to become involved in exposing these practices.

"I'd just as soon not get involved," said one local businessman when asked about alleged kickbacks. "After all, we're in this town to do business. After you're gone, we'll still be at their mercy."

Mass transit outlook dim

SPRINGFIELD — The Illinois Senate adjourned early last night after the State House of Representatives failed to act on a proposed plan for a six-county metropolitan mass transit program.

Adjournment of the Senate meant that legislation on mass transit cannot be passed before the mandatory adjournment of the legislature at midnight tomorrow.

Former committeeman Stavros

The man who holds the power in Wheeling

Copyright, 1973, by Paddock Publications, The Herald

By ROGER CAPETTINI

James "Jimmy" Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman and the "buckstopper" of Wheeling politics for the past 15 years, today remains the most powerful force in Wheeling politics, government and business.

Herald reporters, investigating suspected political corruption in the Northwest suburban village, have learned Stavros was listed in two county offices at the same time in the early and mid-1960s and earlier, resigned from another governmental job under pressure.

Herald reporters also have learned from sources close to a federal grand jury investigation of alleged corruption in the village that federal investigators are trying to define from what base Stavros derives his influence.

SINCE 1957, when Stavros grabbed the reins of the Wheeling Township Democratic organization, governmental, political and electoral controversies stopped when they reached his desk.

Stavros is a reminder of the "old school" concept of Democratic party politics, featuring patronage, political favors and clout. And today the Village of Wheeling — all that is left of Stavros' realm of power — remains the bastion of "old school" politics among North and Northwest suburban Cook County communities.

The 42-year-old Stavros, who now lives in a $100,000 home in unincorporated Northbrook, has been a politician ever since he entered the political arena as a high school student in 1948, when he worked as an assistant precinct captain.

THE YOUNGEST of eight children born on a north Buffalo Grove farm of Greek immigrant parents, Stavros was a star athlete at Arlington High School and for two years played professional baseball in the White Sox farm system.

After a back injury from an auto accident ended his baseball careeer, Stavros came home to Wheeling Township and resumed his work as assistant precinct captain. In 1956 — at age 25 — he ran for state representative from the old sixth district, finishing third in a field of 12 candidates. He soon became a fullfledged precinct captain, and in 1958 challenged the rule of township committeeman Jack Clark of Arlington Heights.

JAMES STAVROS

REAR VIEW of the $100,000 home of James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic Committeeman and still the most powerful man in Wheeling politics and government. The home is located in the fashionable Citation Lake Estates, near Northbrook.

Backed by a number of precinct captains upset by a devastating defeat in 1956, Stavros, at age 28, became the youngest committeeman ever elected in Democratic Party politics.

Making good on his promise to strengthen the party, Stavros felt strong enough by 1961 to expand his political influence and successfully backed candidates in Wheeling municipal elections. By 1962 he had doubled the Democrats' township votes, cutting Republican majorities of 4 to 1 and 3 to 1 to 2 to 1.

IN 1965 HIS village slate whipped the GOP-sponsored candidates by a 3 to 1 margin.

Following his primary victory in 1958 Stavros expanded his horizons once again, going on the payroll of the patronage filled Metroplitan Sanitary District (MSD), where he worked as chief investigator for the legal department.

Stavros' job of investigating accident and injury claims ended suddenly in 1962, however, when it was learned he also owned a construction business in Libertyville. Stavros resigned from the district, reportedly, after another employe was fired by MSD Supt. Vinton Bacon because of a similar dual employment situation.

In 1962, according to Stavros, he joined the staff of newly elected County Board Pres. Seymour Simon, a maverick Democrat who soon became the unofficial mentor for his young aide from Wheeling.

SIMON, INCIDENTALLY, has a request for a cable television franchise still pending before the Wheeling Village Board.

As an investigator for Simon, Stavros once told the Herald he investigated all complaints received at Simon's office. "I investigate complaints of floods, needed road repairs, sewers backing up, zoning squabbles, drainage and many, many others," Stavros said in March, 1966.

Cook County payroll records, however, show Stavros was employed from February, 1963 to December, 1966 with the county highway department as administrative assistant, grade five. The records also show he worked in the land acquisition and condemnation section of the highway department and was paid $917 a month.

It is possible Stavros was paid out of highway department funds, but actually worked for Simon.

Stavros lost his county job in 1966 when Simon was dumped by the Democratic slatemaking committee when he sought renomination to run for a second term as county board president. Almost simultaneously, Stavros reportedly became ill — presumably from an ulcer he said he had been "carrying around for the past seven years."

IN THE NEXT 11 months, Stavros found himself in a hospital on four different occasions, until finally, in November 1967, he announced he could no longer "keep up the pace," and turned the leadership reins of the township organization over to James McCabe, an Arlington Heights attorney.

Stavros was only 37 years old at the time, and although he had enjoyed mild political success, was disappointed he was forced to quit before he could achieve one of his major goals — to win a major elective office.

But even as he retired, Stavros still exercised his influence, naming McCabe as his successor at a meeting of township precinct captains.

Dissension at the meeting raised the ire of Stavros, however, when Don Norman, an Arlington Heights attorney and deputy township committeeman, charged that McCabe's appointment had been "railroaded" through before the meeting was held.

AFTER McCABE'S appointment was approved by a 65 to 2 vote, Stavros blasted the pair of dissenters. "I recruited you and converted you from a Republican," he told Norman. "You can't please everybody, but loyalty is important to an organization."

He continued, "This isn't a stacked meeting and when I meet with the chairman (Chicago Mayor Richard Daley) this whole matter will be resolved." Supporting Stavros at the time were State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights; Juvenile Court Judge Walter Dahl of Arlington Heights; and then Circuit Court Magistrate Robert Buckley of Arlington Heights, now a circuit court judge.

Judge Dahl said at the meeting, "It's Jim's wish that McCabe follow him so I think that's what we ought to do."

Since his official resignation, Stavros has chosen to stay out of the limelight, apparently exercising his influence quietly and behind the scenes.

He has many friends, and allies, however, in key spots in government and business. His brother, August is president of the Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank.

STAVROS' COUSIN Nick Phillips works as a planner for the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals. He and Charles Petrungaro have applied to the village for rezoning and permission to build an 80-unit apartment complex on an 11-acre parcel at 628 McHenry Rd., Wheeling.

The village board is expected to approve the request despite a negative recommendation from the North Cook County Soil and Water Conservation District because almost three of the 11 acres lie in a flood plain.

Bill Beiber, director of biilding and zoning for the village has said the property no longer is in the flood plain.

Board approval of the plans also will allow floor space, lot sizes and parking space below village standards because Phillips and Petrungaro have told the board the units will be occupied by "senior citizens."

Officials 'shook down' businessmen

by LYNN ASINOF

A Herald team of investigative reporters has learned that some Wheeling officials have applied pressure to several small businesses in the village to get payoffs or contracts for work.

According to some businessmen, some village officials use the building and zoning codes to cause delays until the businessmen are willing to pay off.

Current disclosures regarding alleged misdoings in Wheeling governmental offices does not mean every village official is implicated. Instead, it appears as if several, but not all, holders of local government jobs and offices are the focus of the current federal investigation.

THE HERALD will not use the names of local businessmen pending the current federal investigation under way involving Wheeling village government. Herald reporters have been delving into Wheeling governmental practices for the past six months and have turned over all information to federal agencies.

One businessman reported that his building permits were held up more than six months because he was not willing to make under-the-table payoffs to members of certain village departments.

He said he learned that a Wheeling resident close to village government wanted to purchase his land, and he said the permit delays were designed to force him to sell his property.

The businessman said he finally got his permits when he contacted someone close to village government about the delays. "One day I just got a call saying the permits were ready," he said.

WHEN CONTACTED Wednesday, the owner said he would not offer any comment on the advice of his attorney. He said he will provide further information when more people come forward about pressure applied to their businesses.

A second businessman, who handles local business transactions, said he has been involved in several cases where pressure has been applied through delayed building permits or mysteriously complicated zoning procedures.

He said in one case, a businessman had to hire a lawyer with village connections before he could get building permits to remodel his business.

He said other businesses he has dealt with have found themselves in the midst of zoning technicalities until they agreed to pay off various village officials.

ANOTHER BUSINESSMAN who refused to pay off said he was harassed by various village inspections and issued numerous building code violations.

Most of the businessmen contacted said they were never directly approached about a payoff. They said, however, that word eventually filtered down to them that a payoff would make their problems and delays suddenly disappear.

The majority of businessmen contacted said they were also pressured to contract with certain local firms for their plumbing, sign, and other building work.

Local homeowners who have sought hookups with the village water and sewer system have also reported that certain local plumbers and contractors were strongly recommended. In fact, one homeowner said he was told a Wheeling plumber and contractor would have to handle any hook-up to the water lines.

Several businessmen contacted by Herald investigators said they knew of many cases where pressure was applied through permit delays and zoning hassles. They said, however, they could not afford to become involved in exposing these practices.

"I'd just as soon not get involved," said one local businessman when asked about alleged kickbacks. "After all, we're in this town to do business. After you're gone, we'll still be at their mercy."

Squad or desk duty recommended in cop's suit

Patrolman John Luety and his aching feet should be assigned to squad car or desk duty, a federal arbitrator said this week.

The decision is not binding on the city.

"Officer Luety should be given a full and fair opportunity to earn a full week's pay check without insisting that he do so as a foot patrol officer," arbitrator Leon A. Roseli stated in his undated, written opinion.

Despite receipt of the decision Monday, Leuty has remained on downtown foot patrol this week.

Police Chief Arthur Hintz refused comment yesterday. But, Mayor Herbert Behrel said, "I think it's time for both parties to come to an amicable agreement."

"WE WEREN'T unhappy," Leuty said yesterday. "It's a split decision."

Although Roseli recommended reassignment for Leuty, the decision states that:

- Hintz "was within his rights to assign Luety to the foot patrol;
- "There is no proof that the assignment to the foot patrol represents punishment or a form of harassment;
- "Luety not be awarded back pay ($3,700) under the existing circumstances as there is no clear proof that his assignment represents retribution or vengeance."

Luety has filed a $280,000 damage suit against city officials, charging injury to his feet and discrimination in assignment of foot patrol. Circuit Court Judge James Mejda denied Luety's request June 10 for a temporary injunction forcing rotation of the foot patrol.

IN DENYING the temporary injunction request, Mejda said that "this court is not equipped to consider supervision of activity in municipal government. Testimony has shown that the plaintiff is not without remedy" of arbitration.

Roseli listened to testimony from Luety and city officials at a hearing in city hall March 14.

Luety was assigned foot patrol in February, 1972. He contended that he was removed from squad car duty when he refused Hintz's order to cut his sideburns.

Luety has charged that he has missed 92 days of work because of foot ailments and has seen a foot doctor 14 or 15 times.

Although Mejda ruled that "there is no proof of incapability," the arbitrator said that "Leuty's difficulty with his feet is basically genuine. He has demonstrated a sufficient sensitivity to prevent him from working a full five-day work week."

"SINCE LUETY has merely requested a reassignment to some job like patrol car work or desk assignment, where he could work five days a week, such a request does not appear to be unreasonable in the light of the existing circumstances."

The opinion contrasts the "stubbornness" of Luety to the city's refusal to change assignment. "Neither position is correct.

"There is no good reason why the foot patrol job should not be rotated among all officers from time to time."

Roseli "recommends that the attitudes of both parties are in need of improvement; that instead of continuing the apparent animosity which exists, there is need for correction and reestablishing a fair and wholesome attitude."

LUETY SAID "we've waited 49 weeks for this. Now the public is going to find out one way or the other if I'm right. There are no strings attached to putting me back in a car.

"I'd have heart failure if they went along with it," 24-year-old Luety said. "This surely strengthens our court case — a plain old civil suit for a quarter of a million.

"I could see a city offer to drop the suit and we'll honor the arbitration. But, I'm not going to do that. I'm confident we'll win."

Girl Scouts raise money for visit to Washington

by REGINA OEHLER

It's been a long year and a lot of work, but finally 41 Girl Scouts from Cadet Troop 624 have saved up enough money to go to Washington D.C. They will be leaving Sunday.

The entire troop worked together to raise the $75 per girl and almost everyone in the troop is going on the 6-day trip. Some girls even contributed cash to the fund, said Girl Scout Gail Pentz.

The biggest problem in raising the money was getting people to come out to the fund raising events, said another scout, Terrie Nicoley. The troop held an ice cream social, a rummage sale, car washes, bake sales and a fashion show to model the new scouting uniforms.

When the troop held the fashion show, Girl Scout Vicki Galla explained, "everyone was going to come." Then the PTA called a special meeting and only a few people showed.

BUT THE FASHION show was a lot of fun. "Most of the clothes we were given were Brownie clothes and not all of us are that tiny," Terrie said. A local department store loaned the new Brownie outfits to the troop, but the new Girl Scout uniforms won't be out for another two months or so.

The girls will be staying at Rockwood, said scout leader Pam Dahl. Rockwood is the National Girl Scout Headquarters, only a few miles from Washington D.C. Girl Scouts from all over the world visit there.

The troop will visit government buildings and see several of the memorials in Washington. They also plan to visit Georgetown and Mt. Vernon. Sometime during the trip, they will place a wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier at Arlington Park Cemetery.

The highlight of the trip, according to several of the scouts, will be seeing "Godspell" at the Ford Theater.

Originally, the girls wanted to go to Disneyland in Florida, but they couldn't get reservations to camp there.

BY MIDNIGHT she hadn't returned and staff members began making calls, trying to find her.

"Cindy's not a bad girl, she's not sick, she's not an addict or anything like that," Dr. Gavin said. "We showed her we cared about her and she was just a doll."

Maryville program will bring young, old together

Grandparents are special people and so are grandchildren. A new program at Maryville Academy in Des Plaines will attempt to bring the two together.

The Foster Grandparent Program is tentatively scheduled to start at Maryville Academy in mid-July Initially, it is hoped that 10 senior citizens from the Des Plaines area can be found to participate in the program.

The Foster Grandparent Program offers senior citizens and youngsters an opportunity to form a mutually beneficial relationship. Senior citizens work on a one to one basis with physically, mentally and emotionally handicapped children at residential institutions like Maryville. The children receive a meaningful contact and the foster grandparents a feeling of being gainfully employed.

Children identified as needing the most love and attention are assigned to the foster grandparents. The foster grandparents spend two hours a day, five days a week working with these children. They are paid $1.60 an hour for a maximum of 20 hours.

Maryville Academy will provide transportation and lunches for the senior citizens involved in the program.

TO BE ELIGIBLE to participate in the program a person must be over 60 and have an income not exceeding $2,100 if they are single or $2,725 if they are married.

Applications for the program are available at the Northwest Opportunity Center, 3411 Kirchoff Rd., Rolling Meadows, or by calling Rita DeGonia at the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity at 922-9158. Applicants all will be interviewed by a staff member of the Foster Grandparent Program prior to being assigned to Maryville Academy.

The Foster Grandparent Program is funded by Action an umbrella organization of all federally funded voluntary organizations. The program, operated mainly by the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity, is slated to run for five years.

All foster grandparents go through a two-week, 40-hour training program before they start working alone with the children.

THIS SAME program was started at Little City in Palatine in February but suspended three months later because of transportation problems. Although there were plans to involve 10 senior citizens in the program at Little City only three were actually working with the children at the time it was suspended.

No negotiations for Oakton campus

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Officials at High School Dist. 207 and Oakton Community College vigorously denied yesterday that plans are being made for the college to locate its permanent campus at one of the Maine Township high schools.

According to a report in a local weekly newspaper, an unidentified Oakton official said negotiations are taking place between the two schools allowing Oakton to purchase Maine North or Maine East high school as a permanent campus. Several officials at Oakton and Dist. 207 denied the report.

Paul Gilson, president of the Oakton Board of Trustees and chairman of the board's site committee, said negotiations with Dist. 207 are not taking place and have never taken place. He said he didn't know who made the statement but "I'm going to attempt to find out."

David Hilquist, Oakton business manager, also denied that negotiations with Dist. 207 are taking place. He said a community resident made the suggestion to the college board in a letter to a newspaper more than six months ago but the college never began negotiations with the high school.

OAKTON TRUSTEES Thomas Flynn, Stephen Loska and William Koehnline, college president, said they were not aware of any site negotiations with Dist. 207. "I'm kind of perplexed that any official would make such a statement without the full knowledge of the board and the rest of the administration," said Loska.

Merlin Schultz, coordinator of pupil personnel services for Dist. 207, said he was referred to in the newspaper story but he was not identified. Schultz said talk of negotiations between Oakton and Dist. 207 are "strictly rumor and all a bunch of rubbish."

"I was speaking as a private individual," and not a school official, said Schultz. "I know nothing about it," he said, "As far as I know it is all strictly rumor without one iota of truth."

The newspaper report also said there are rumors that Maine and Niles townships will combine their high school districts and that Maine North High School would be made into a freshman-sophomore school or a vocational center. Schultz said he did discuss the rumors with the newspaper but said he could not say whether the rumors are true. "I don't recall that this discussion ever took place," he said, "it was never brought up informally or formally" in the school district.

RICHARD SHORT, superintendent at Dist. 207, said there is no truth to the rumor that the district has been negotiating with Oakton to sell one of the Maine schools to the college. He also said there have been no discussions with Niles Township High School Dist. 219 to combine with Dist. 207. "No such things are under consideration," he said.

Dewane Barnes, president of the teachers association at Dist. 207 said "I have not heard of any negotiations. I have not heard any rumors to that effect."

Former board member Michael Bartos told the Herald that board member Roy Makela suggested more than six months ago that Dist. 207 might sell one of the high schools to Oakton. Bartos said Makela was just "throwing out the idea," but no serious consideration has ever been given to it. Makela could not be reached for comment yesterday.

Oakton has been searching for a permanent campus for about three years but has had difficulty finding a site in its densely populated district. Dist. 207 opened its fourth high school in 1970 and is now making plans for additional construction on the school. Several residents and teachers in Dist. 207 have complained that the fourth high school should not have been built because enrollment in Dist. 207 will begin declining in a few years.

Despite Oakton's site problem and controversy over construction of the fourth high school, college and Dist. 207 officials deny that they are discussing the sale of any Dist. 207 school to Oakton.

Squad or desk duty recommended in cop's suit

Patrolman John Luety and his aching feet should be assigned to squad car or desk duty, a federal arbitrator said this week.

The decision is not binding on the city.

"Officer Luety should be given a full and fair opportunity to earn a full week's pay check without insisting that he do so as a foot patrol officer," arbitrator Leon A. Roseli stated in his undated, written opinion.

Despite receipt of the decision Monday, Leuty has remained on downtown foot patrol this week.

Police Chief Arthur Hintz refused comment yesterday. But, Mayor Herbert Behrel said, "I think it's time for both parties to come to an amicable agreement."

"WE WEREN'T unhappy," Leuty said yesterday. "It's a split decision."

Although Roseli recommended reassignment for Leuty, the decision states that:

- Hintz "was within his rights to assign Luety to the foot patrol;
- "There is no proof that the assignment to the foot patrol represents punishment or a form of harassment;
- "Luety not be awarded back pay ($3,700) under the existing circumstances as there is no clear proof that his assignment represents retribution or vengeance."

Luety has filed a $280,000 damage suit against city officials, charging injury to his feet and discrimination in assignment of foot patrol. Circuit Court Judge James Mejda denied Luety's request June 10 for a temporary injunction forcing rotation of the foot patrol.

IN DENYING the temporary injunction request, Mejda said that "this court is not equipped to consider supervision of activity in municipal government. Testimony has shown that the plaintiff is not without remedy" of arbitration.

Roseli listened to testimony from Luety and city officials at a hearing in city hall March 14.

Luety was assigned foot patrol in February, 1972. He contended that he was removed from squad car duty when he refused Hintz's order to cut his sideburns.

Luety has charged that he has missed 92 days of work because of foot ailments and has seen a foot doctor 14 or 15 times.

Although Mejda ruled that "there is no proof of incapability," the arbitrator said that "Leuty's difficulty with his feet is basically genuine. He has demonstrated a sufficient sensitivity to prevent him from working a full five-day work week."

"SINCE LUETY has merely requested a reassignment to some job like patrol car work or desk assignment, where he could work five days a week, such a request does not appear to be unreasonable in the light of the existing circumstances."

The opinion contrasts the "stubbornness" of Luety to the city's refusal to change assignment. "Neither position is correct.

"There is no good reason why the foot patrol job should not be rotated among all officers from time to time."

Roseli "recommends that the attitudes of both parties are in need of improvement; that instead of continuing the apparent animosity which exists, there is need for correction and reestablishing a fair and wholesome attitude."

LUETY SAID "we've waited 49 weeks for this. Now the public is going to find out one way or the other if I'm right. There are no strings attached to putting me back in a car.

"I'd have heart failure if they went along with it," 24-year-old Luety said. "This surely strengthens our court case — a plain old civil suit for a quarter of a million.

"I could see a city offer to drop the suit and we'll honor the arbitration. But, I'm not going to do that. I'm confident we'll win."

Girl Scouts raise money for visit to Washington

by REGINA OEHLER

It's been a long year and a lot of work, but finally 41 Girl Scouts from Cadet Troop 624 have saved up enough money to go to Washington D.C. They will be leaving Sunday.

The entire troop worked together to raise the $75 per girl and almost everyone in the troop is going on the 6-day trip. Some girls even contributed cash to the fund, said Girl Scout Gail Pentz.

The biggest problem in raising the money was getting people to come out to the fund raising events, said another scout, Terrie Nicoley. The troop held an ice cream social, a rummage sale, car washes, bake sales and a fashion show to model the new scouting uniforms.

When the troop held the fashion show, Girl Scout Vicki Galla explained, "everyone was going to come." Then the PTA called a special meeting and only a few people showed.

BUT THE FASHION show was a lot of fun. "Most of the clothes we were given were Brownie clothes and not all of us are that tiny," Terrie said. A local department store loaned the new Brownie outfits to the troop, but the new Girl Scout uniforms won't be out for another two months or so.

The girls will be staying at Rockwood, said scout leader Pam Dahl. Rockwood is the National Girl Scout Headquarters, only a few miles from Washington D.C. Girl Scouts from all over the world visit there.

The troop will visit government buildings and see several of the memorials in Washington. They also plan to visit Georgetown and Mt. Vernon. Sometime during the trip, they will place a wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier at Arlington Park Cemetery.

The highlight of the trip, according to several of the scouts, will be seeing "Godspell" at the Ford Theater.

Originally, the girls wanted to go to Disneyland in Florida, but they couldn't get reservations to camp there.

A psychologist took a phone call from Cindy at about 10:30 p.m. Thursday. She and Rich had car trouble and they'd be late, Cindy said.

BY MIDNIGHT she hadn't returned and staff members began making calls, trying to find her.

Shortly after 1 a.m. Holy Family and the police called.

"Cindy's not a bad girl, she's not sick, she's not an addict or anything like that," Dr. Gavin said. "We showed her we cared about her and she was just a doll."

Residents reminded to store gas in cans

The Des Plaines Bureau of Fire Prevention, urges residents to store flammable liquids only in red metal cans which will not break when mishandled and which can readily be identified as flammable liquid containers.

Fire Chief Frank Haag, reminds service station operators the State Law requires that they do not sell gasoline to customers carrying glass, plastic and other such containers. Station operators who do not observe this law are subject to fines, Chief Haag said.

No negotiations for Oakton campus

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Officials at High School Dist. 207 and Oakton Community College vigorously denied yesterday that plans are being made for the college to locate its permanent campus at one of the Maine Township high schools.

According to a report in a local weekly newspaper, an unidentified Oakton official said negotiations are taking place between the two schools allowing Oakton to purchase Maine North or Maine East high school as a permanent campus. Several officials at Oakton and Dist. 207 denied the report.

Paul Gilson, president of the Oakton Board of Trustees and chairman of the board's site committee, said negotiations with Dist. 207 are not taking place and have never taken place. He said he didn't know who made the statement but "I'm going to attempt to find out."

David Hilquist, Oakton business manager, also denied that negotiations with Dist. 207 are taking place. He said a community resident made the suggestion to the college board in a letter to a newspaper more than six months ago but the college never began negotiations with the high school.

OAKTON TRUSTEES Thomas Flynn, Stephen Loska and William Koehnline, college president, said they were not aware of any site negotiations with Dist. 207. "I'm kind of perplexed that any official would make such a statement without the full knowledge of the board and the rest of the administration," said Loska.

Merlin Schultz, coordinator of pupil personnel services for Dist. 207, said he was referred to in the newspaper story but he was not identified. Schultz said talk of negotiations between Oakton and Dist. 207 are "strictly rumor and all a bunch of rubbish."

"I was speaking as a private individual," and not a school official, said Schultz. "I know nothing about it," he said, "As far as I know it is all strictly rumor without one iota of truth."

The newspaper report also said there are rumors that Maine and Niles townships will combine their high school districts and that Maine North High School would be made into a freshman-sophomore school or a vocational center. Schultz said he did discuss the rumors with the newspaper but said he could not say whether the rumors are true. "I don't recall that this discussion ever took place," he said, "it was never brought up informally or formally" in the school district.

RICHARD SHORT, superintendent at Dist. 207, said there is no truth to the rumor that the district has been negotiating with Oakton to sell one of the Maine schools to the college. He also said there have been no discussions with Niles Township High School Dist. 219 to combine with Dist. 207. "No such things are under consideration," he said.

Dewane Barnes, president of the teachers association at Dist. 207 said "I have not heard of any negotiations. I have not heard any rumors to that effect."

Former board member Michael Bartos told the Herald that board member Roy Makela suggested more than six months ago that Dist. 207 might sell one of the high schools to Oakton. Bartos said Makela was just "throwing out the idea," but no serious consideration has ever been given to it. Makela could not be reached for comment yesterday.

Oakton has been searching for a permanent campus for about three years but has had difficulty finding a site in its densely populated district. Dist. 207 opened its fourth high school in 1970 and is now making plans for additional construction on the school. Several residents and teachers in Dist. 207 have complained that the fourth high school should not have been built because enrollment in Dist. 207 will begin declining in a few years.

Despite Oakton's site problem and controversy over construction of the fourth high school, college and Dist. 207 officials deny that they are discussing the sale of any Dist. 207 school to Oakton.

Maryville program will bring young, old together

Grandparents are special people and so are grandchildren. A new program at Maryville Academy in Des Plaines will attempt to bring the two together.

The Foster Grandparent Program is tentatively scheduled to start at Maryville Academy in mid-July Initially, it is hoped that 10 senior citizens from the Des Plaines area can be found to participate in the program.

The Foster Grandparent Program offers senior citizens and youngsters an opportunity to form a mutually beneficial relationship. Senior citizens work on a one to one basis with physically, mentally and emotionally handicapped children at residential institutions like Maryville. The children receive a meaningful contact and the foster grandparents a feeling of being gainfully employed.

Children identified as needing the most love and attention are assigned to the foster grandparents. The foster grandparents spend two hours a day, five days a week working with these children. They are paid $1.60 an hour for a maximum of 20 hours.

Maryville Academy will provide transportation and lunches for the senior citizens involved in the program.

TO BE ELIGIBLE to participate in the program a person must be over 60 and have an income not exceeding $2,100 if they are single or $2,725 if they are married.

Applications for the program are available at the Northwest Opportunity Center, 3411 Kirchoff Rd., Rolling Meadows, or by calling Rita DeGonia at the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity at 922-9158. Applicants all will be interviewed by a staff member of the Foster Grandparent Program prior to being assigned to Maryville Academy.

The Foster Grandparent Program is funded by Action an umbrella organization of all federally funded voluntary organizations. The program, operated mainly by the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity, is slated to run for five years.

All foster grandparents go through a two-week, 40-hour training program before they start working alone with the children.

THIS SAME program was started at Little City in Palatine in February but suspended three months later because of transportation problems. Although there were plans to involve 10 senior citizens in the program at Little City only three were actually working with the children at the time it was suspended.

Garbage-dumping in Northwest suburban bodies of water appalling

by DIANE STEFANOS

If Narcissus had ever leaned over to adore his image in a Northwest suburban body of water, chances are he'd never see it. Instead, he would stand appalled at the amount of garbage and debris piled high in the waters.

"You wouldn't believe how filthy people are. Instead of having to pay a garbage pickup to haul off their large garbage items, people sneak off to the rivers, creeks and lakes near their homes late at night to dump off their unnecessary goods," said Dick Lanyon of the Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago (MSD).

The district sends out three crews of six to eight men a day who maintain a constant cleanup of major creeks, rivers and their tributaries in Cook County. These crews visit significant water areas where health and flooding are endangered by debris at least twice a year.

William Eyre, engineer of Chicago Waterways for the MSD, said, "You name it, we've pulled it out of the water: furniture, autos and car parts, refrigerators, bikes and stolen child's things. There's just so much in those areas and every time we go back to them, say every three months or so, there's more garbage piled up there."

ALTHOUGH many of the local communities help to supply trucks to transport the debris taken from the water to private land fills, often times the sanitary district must pay for the transportation cost.

Lanyon admits that the problem of people dumping garbage and unwanted materials in the area bodies of water has gotten progressively worse over the years. People who live by these area rivers or creeks often call up and complain to the district, although residents living outside of the immediate water area are not directly affected.

"They're probably unaware of the situation until they go to picnic or fish in these areas and see them filled with unnecessary debris," he said.

Chicago's problem with debris thrown into waterways may not seem as bad because they don't have as many open streams. However, the Chicago River and surrounding Chicago harbors and canals are traditional eyesores.

THE CITY of Chicago recently completed a "clean-up" job that cost them $293,000. The U.S. Army Corps of engineers, who supervised the project in the North Branch of the Chicago River, hauled out telephone booths, light posts and fixtures, whole cars and auto parts, shopping cars, boots and tires, picnic tables and tree stumps and sections.

Having also clean-up debris from harbors along Chicago's western shore in the past, the corps used to dump the debris they cleaned up in the open portion of Lake Michigan.

"The Environmental Protection Agency surveyed the items in the lake and found most of them pollution provoking materials. A dike disposal program is underway to build a confined area of lake water where the garbage can be dumped and the water eventually displaced by the debris without hurting anything," said John Perez, civil engineer with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

IT WAS the first time the North Chicago River had undergone a clean-up project.

"And so many areas have never undergone clean-up jobs and that's why they are so filthy," said Joe Haseman, superintendent of streets in Des Plaines.

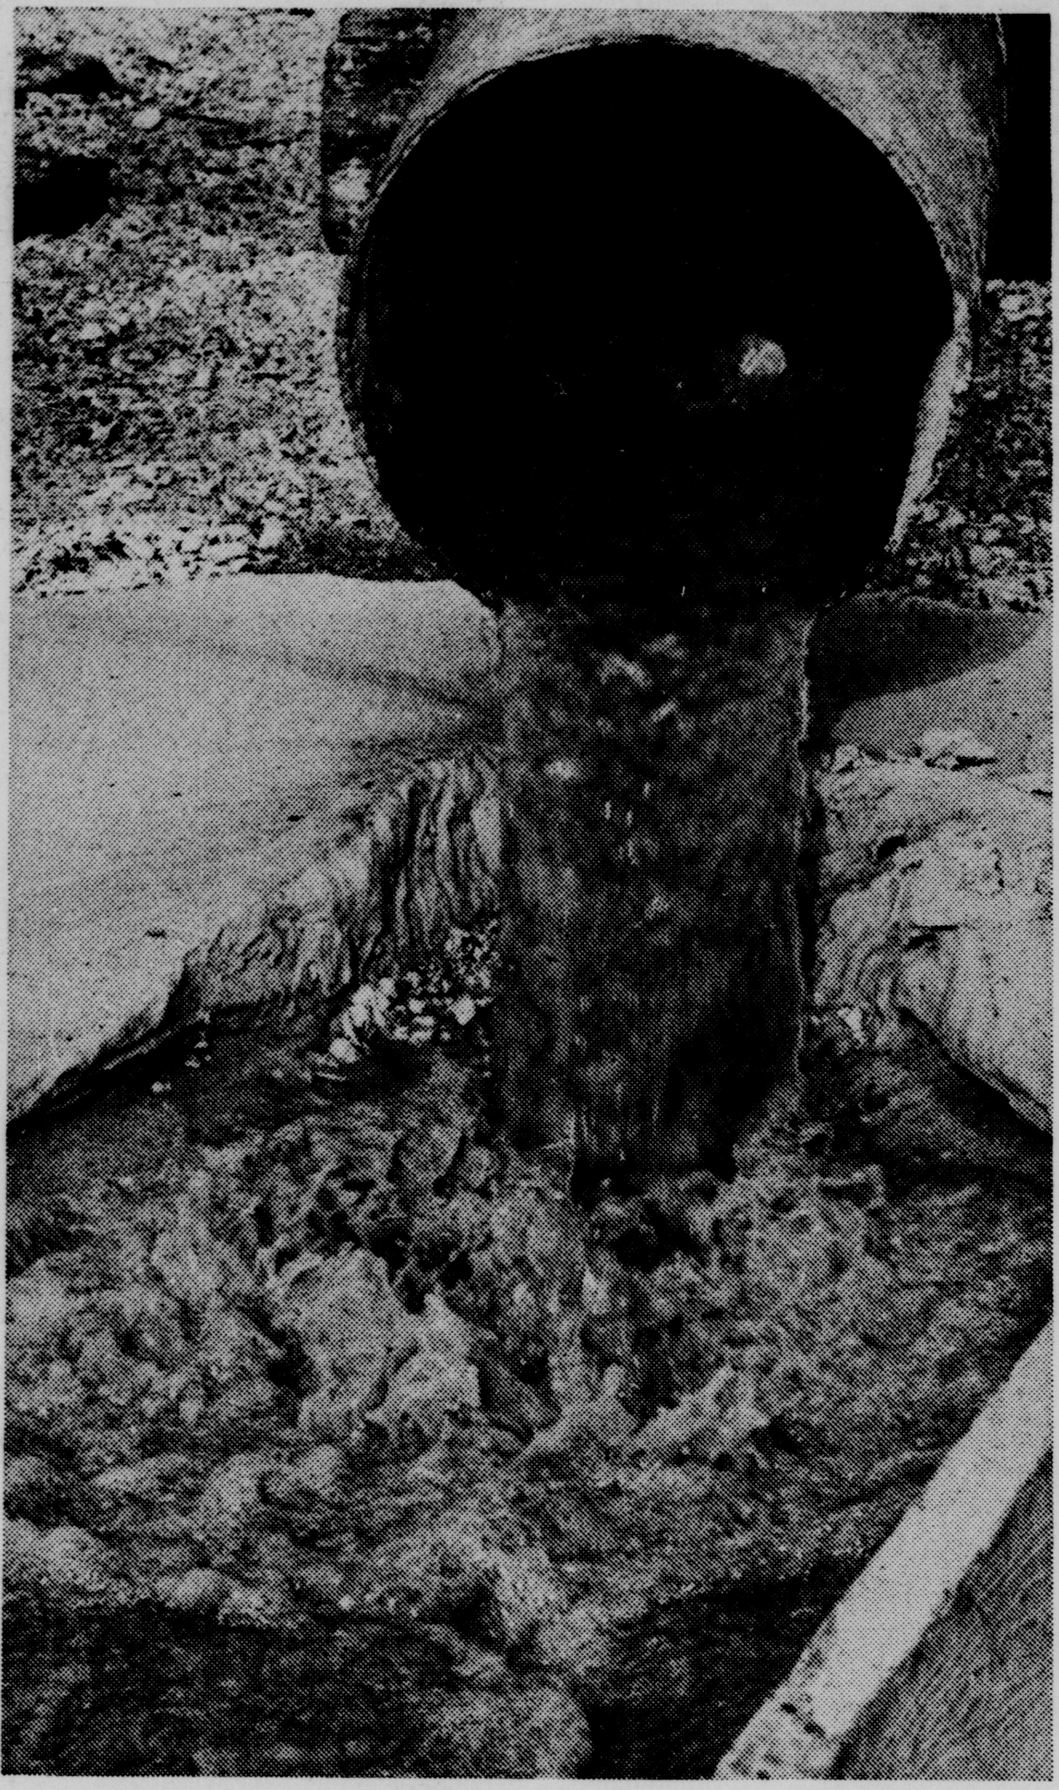
For instance, the creek running through Des Plaines's Orchard Place section has never been cleaned up before. So excessive amount of debris have been hauled off by the city to private dumps.

"People use these places for garbage dumps. That Orchard Place creek could be one of the most beautiful bodies of water we have around here after we finish cleaning, and if people can stop using it for a dumping grounds. It's up to the people, they have to do it," Haseman said.

MURRY PIPKIN, chief of the Bureau of Engineering for the Illinois Division of Waterways contends that the continued and increasing amounts of debris in area water bodies are due to spiraling urbanization in suburban areas of Cook County.

"Where there're more people, there're more problems; so where there's water, there's dumping."

But people do not realize that the debris they often throw into these bodies of water can also be the cause for much flooding that occurs in their areas.



"Items like shopping carts that are very wirey collect much natural and man-made debris while they are in the water, thus causing a obstacle to passage of water. The less water that is able to flow through these bodies during a heavy rainstorm, the more water collects and finally overflows into the homes and basements of residents," said Pipkin.

MANY TIMES these municipal or sanitary district crews are called out on emergency problems where too much debris has blocked off the free flow of waters and have caused extensive flooding in heavy rainfalls.

In Des Plaines and other heavily wooded areas, a major blockade of water is created by tree sections, branches and twigs that fall into the water and form a natural dam in the rivers and their tributaries.

"Sometimes, after cleaning up a body of water, a good thing to prevent continued flooding and blockage is to widen the waterway and to reinforce its sides so that soil and rock from the banks do not give way into the water," Haseman said.

Riffracking is a common practice where broken pieces of concrete are fitted up against the walls of the river to prevent its dirt sides from falling in and blocking up the water flow.

Widening modifications in north suburban creeeks and river tributaries have been frequent over the past couple of years. The Division of Waterways has conducted the widening project of the Des Plaines River over the past 10 to 15 years working upstream. Arlington Heights' Salt Creek has been widened continually over the past six years near the race track area especially.

LANYON EXPLAINED that although this widening helps the water flow faster to larger bodies instead of overflowing into the homes of tributary residents, it does sometimes cause "bottle necking" in smaller sections of the rivers.

"Everyone always gets many complaints about debris and irregular flooding caused by blockups in the water. Many of our complaints are about people who dump land fill, rocks or dirt in the river to either protect their own property on the banks of the river against flooding, or to illegally extend their own land out into the river," said Greg Parker, an MSD design engineer.

Another means of coping with insufficient space for storm water, which would otherwise seep into resident's basements, is the reservoir and water retention centers becoming more evident in the Northwest suburbs over the past few years.

"We've spent $32 million of a $380 million sanitary bond issue passed by the general assembly in 1969 for flood control facilities in Cook County," said Layton of the Metropolitan Sanitary District.

The Wilke-Kirchoff retention basin in Arlington Heights is presently under construction and the MSD has also completed flood control work in 1970 on the Buffalo Grove Creek in Wheeling.

Weller Creek in Des Plaines has been the site for recent flood control work, and construction on a five-acre retention basin lake on the Arlington Golf course in Buffalo Grove will begin in October. Plans for a reservoir system in the Busse Woods will also begin materializing after July 1.

"IT'S IMPOSSIBLE not to see that municipal, county and state agencies are constantly working to cleanup area water debris, to prevent debris from causing unnecessary flooding and unhealthy conditions, and construct new flood controlling devices in Cook County," said Emory Kilpatric, bureau chief of Instruction and Operations in Springfield.

"It's up to the people to stop throwing their garbage into these water bodies. With all the talk of pollution and ecology, you'd think they would care that much."

Instead of having to pay a garbage pickup to haul off their large garbage items, people sneak off to the rivers, creeks and lakes near their homes late at night to dump off their unnecessary goods," said Dick Lanyon of the Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago (MSD).

The district sends out three crews of six to eight men a day who maintain a constant cleanup of major creeks, rivers and their tributaries in Cook County. These crews visit significant water areas where health and flooding are endangered by debris at least twice a year.

William Eyre, engineer of Chicago Waterways for the MSD, said, "You name it, we've pulled it out of the water: furniture, autos and car parts, refrigerators, bikes and stolen child's things. There's just so much in those areas and every time we go back to them, say every three months or so, there's more garbage piled up there."

ALTHOUGH many of the local communities help to supply trucks to transport the debris taken from the water to private land fills, often times the sanitary district must pay for the transportation cost.

Lanyon admits that the problem of people dumping garbage and unwanted materials in the area bodies of water has gotten progressively worse over the years. People who live by these area rivers or creeks often call up and complain to the district, although residents living outside of the immediate water area are not directly affected.

"They're probably unaware of the situation until they go to picnic or fish in these areas and see them filled with unnecessary debris," he said.

Chicago's problem with debris thrown into waterways may not seem as bad because they don't have as many open streams. However, the Chicago River and surrounding Chicago harbors and canals are traditional eyesores.

THE CITY of Chicago recently completed a "clean-up" job that cost them $293,000. The U.S. Army Corps of engineers, who supervised the project in the North Branch of the Chicago River, hauled out telephone booths, light posts and fixtures, whole cars and auto parts, shopping cars, boots and tires, picnic tables and tree stumps and sections.

Having also clean-up debris from harbors along Chicago's western shore in the past, the corps used to dump the debris they cleaned up in the open portion of Lake Michigan.

"The Environmental Protection Agency surveyed the items in the lake and found most of them pollution provoking materials. A dike disposal program is underway to build a confined area of lake water where the garbage can be dumped and the water eventually displaced by the debris without hurting anything," said John Perez, civil engineer with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

IT WAS the first time the North Chicago River had undergone a clean-up project.

"And so many areas have never undergone clean-up jobs and that's why they are so filthy," said Joe Haseman, superintendent of streets in Des Plaines.

For instance, the creek running through Des Plaines's Orchard Place section has never been cleaned up before. So excessive amount of debris have been hauled off by the city to private dumps.

"People use these places for garbage dumps. That Orchard Place creek could be one of the most beautiful bodies of water we have around here after we finish cleaning, and if people can stop using it for a dumping grounds. It's up to the people, they have to do it," Haseman said.

MURRY PIPKIN, chief of the Bureau of Engineering for the Illinois Division of Waterways contends that the continued and increasing amounts of debris in area water bodies are due to spiraling urbanization in suburban areas of Cook County.

"Where there're more people, there're more problems; so where there's water, there's dumping."

But people do not realize that the debris they often throw into these bodies of water can also be the cause for much flooding that occurs in their areas.

"Items like shopping carts that are very wirey collect much natural and man-made debris while they are in the water, thus causing a obstacle to passage of water. The less water that is able to flow through these bodies during a heavy rainstorm, the more water collects and finally overflows into the homes and basements of residents," said Pipkin.

MANY TIMES these municipal or sanitary district crews are called out on emergency problems where too much debris has blocked off the free flow of waters and have caused extensive flooding in heavy rainfalls.

In Des Plaines and other heavily wooded areas, a major blockade of water is created by tree sections, branches and twigs that fall into the water and form a natural dam in the rivers and their tributaries.

"Sometimes, after cleaning up a body of water, a good thing to prevent continued flooding and blockage is to widen the waterway and to reinforce its sides so that soil and rock from the banks do not give way into the water," Haseman said.

Riffracking is a common practice where broken pieces of concrete are fitted up against the walls of the river to prevent its dirt sides from falling in and blocking up the water flow.

Widening modifications in north suburban creeeks and river tributaries have been frequent over the past couple of years. The Division of Waterways has conducted the widening project of the Des Plaines River over the past 10 to 15 years working upstream. Arlington Heights' Salt Creek has been widened continually over the past six years near the race track area especially.

LANYON EXPLAINED that although this widening helps the water flow faster to larger bodies instead of overflowing into the homes of tributary residents, it does sometimes cause "bottle necking" in smaller sections of the rivers.

"Everyone always gets many complaints about debris and irregular flooding caused by blockups in the water. Many of our complaints are about people who dump land fill, rocks or dirt in the river to either protect their own property on the banks of the river against flooding, or to illegally extend their own land out into the river," said Greg Parker, an MSD design engineer.

Another means of coping with insufficient space for storm water, which would otherwise seep into resident's basements, is the reservoir and water retention centers becoming more evident in the Northwest suburbs over the past few years.

"We've spent $32 million of a $380 million sanitary bond issue passed by the general assembly in 1969 for flood control facilities in Cook County," said Layton of the Metropolitan Sanitary District.

The Wilke-Kirchoff retention basin in Arlington Heights is presently under construction and the MSD has also completed flood control work in 1970 on the Buffalo Grove Creek in Wheeling.

Weller Creek in Des Plaines has been the site for recent flood control work, and construction on a five-acre retention basin lake on the Arlington Golf course in Buffalo Grove will begin in October. Plans for a reservoir system in the Busse Woods will also begin materializing after July 1.

"IT'S IMPOSSIBLE not to see that municipal, county and state agencies are constantly working to cleanup area water debris, to prevent debris from causing unnecessary flooding and unhealthy conditions, and construct new flood controlling devices in Cook County," said Emory Kilpatric, bureau chief of Instruction and Operations in Springfield.

"It's up to the people to stop throwing their garbage into these water bodies. With all the talk of pollution and ecology, you'd think they would care that much."

O'Hare 'noise pollution' hearing set

Local officials and citizens disturbed by the noise pollution from O'Hare Airport will get a chance to talk Saturday to the people who can do something about the problem.

U. S. Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th, will convene an ad hoc congressional hearing on the problem at 9:30 a.m. Saturday in Maine South High School in Park Ridge. Representatives of the Federal Aviation Agency (FAA), Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Air Transport Assoc. have accepted Young's invitation to appear at the hearing.

"The Supreme Court has ruled that local units of government can't interfere with the interstate traffic of airplanes. But that doesn't mean the local people have no voice on the issue," Young said.

"They've said plenty about it to me and that's why I've set up this hearing to allow the people of the 10th District to get answers and information from the airlines and the agencies that regulate them," he explained.

SCHEDULED TO open the hearing are Mayor Martin Butler of Park Ridge, Mayor Herbert Behrel of Des Plaines and Mayor Nicholas Blase from Niles. The mayors of Glenview, Winnetka and Lincolnwood may also appear.

"Airplanes are noisy," Behrel said. "I don't think the FAA and the airlines are moving fast enough to control the noise. I can't help but notice that the L1011 and the DC 10's are very quiet. But I don't see cutbacks in the noise on other ships."

Others who have said they will attend are Lloyd Hinton, of the National Organization to Insure a Sound Environment (NOISE); A. L. McPike of Douglas Aircraft; James Dilli of the Illinois Department of Aeronautics, and Jack Moore of the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The Chicago Department of Aviation, which operates the airport, has also been invited to the hearing. However, department officials have said they will send a statement but no representatives.

"WE'VE BEEN calling them for two weeks and they are completely ignoring our request," said Jim Brophy of Young's office. Several witnesses, including those from Des Plaines, had expected to get runway use information from the department's officials.

Brophy said he expects about 100 residents to testify at the hearing in the faculty lounge at Maine South 1111 Dee Road.

Individuals not representing a group can testify after 3:30 p.m., Brophy said. "We're asking them to limit their public testimony to five or ten minutes," he said. "We're also asking them to put their testimony into written form in case we don't have time to hear them."

Testimony for the City of Des Plaines will be presented by Philip Lindahl, the city's environmental control officer. Lindahl contends that 22-R, the O'Hare runway that sends the most air traffic over Des Plaines, is used more often than the other runways.

HE HAS CHARGED that 31 per cent of takeoffs and landings are conducted over the Northwest suburbs. The percentages for other directions include: east — 22 per cent; southeast — 16 per cent; northeast — 11 per cent; southwest — 10 per cent; and west — 10 percent, according to Lindahl. Lindahl's totals were based on a 1972 Northeastern Illinois Plan Commission report on O'Hare use. The figures were compiled in Octboer, 1969 and were projections for 1975 airport traffic levels.

"We're going to ask why information about how often runways are used is not kept anymore," Lindahl said yesterday. "We know that the runways over Des Plaines are being used more and we want to verify it."

Monitoring of runway use was stopped last fall when the FAA contended the bookkeeping was too difficult and that the agency was understaffed. Behrel said he believes the monitoring was stopped to eliminate verification data for complaints of too many flights over Des Plaines and not enough over Park Ridge.

LINDAHL SAID he would also ask for a public accounting of future expansion plans for the airport. Reports several years ago indicated a third runway system was going to be added to the airport. Lindahl said he wants to know if an additonal runway would bring more traffic over Des Plaines.

Young says the hearing will provide a valuable study for him and other congressmen.

"On July 27 the EPA will report on the problems of airport noise. That report and the records of hearings like Saturday's will be the data Congress uses to draw up reasonable, workable standards and a timetable for solving the problem," he said.

Young said possible solutions for abating airport noise pollution are new landing and approach patterns, standard noise levels, zoning residential areas away from airports and prohibiting air traffic during certain hours.

Dealers serve regular customers first

Crisis squeezes transient gas buyers

UNHAPPINESS IS a "no gas" sign for many motorists, the allocation plans of major oil companies are causing problems in buying gasoline. The price freeze is adding to the shortage problem, say some dealers.

by LEA TONKIN

Service station operators trying to stretch limited supplies of gasoline may be squeezing out the transient customer to stay in business.

This means motorists should keep their gasoline tanks half full when on vacation, or some distance from their regular service station, advised Pete Vanery, owner of the Tallyho Union 76 station in Arlington Heights. He has first-hand knowledge of the fuel shortage.

"I've been out of gasoline since Tuesday," Vanery said Thursday. "So I'm doing back room business only." He hopes to get a break from his supplier, an advance on his July allocation of gasoline, so he can resume sales this morning.

UNION OIL began an allocation program (limit on supply) in April, says Vanery. "But I never knew I was on allocation," he says. The company informed him in May of the 20 per cent cutback in gasoline supplies compared to last year's sales. "In May it hit me," he says, "so I had to borrow 5,000 gallons from the June allotment." This month has brought even more problems in meeting the demand for gas.

"All I want now is repeat business," Vanery continued. "I'm going to close whenever I'm likely to get transient business — Sundays, holidays, and nights." Vanery says he has a moral and financial obligation to serve his regular customers, even if this means closing early.

"My advice to customers is, start looking for gasoline whenever your tank is below half full. There's no place in the country where gasoline is unavailable," he added. "It's a matter of looking in the right place, and when you find gasoline, you grab it."

JAMES BRAWAR, administrator of the Illinois Service Station Operators Association, says most major brand dealers can decide how to ration their limited supplies, by operating fewer hours or limiting the amount of gasoline a customer can buy.

"It's a ticklish problem," he said, "because some dealers are afraid they'll run out over the July 4 weekend."

The Phase 3½ hunt for price violations by gasoline retailers is unfair, says Brawar, adding that this will contribute to the supply shortage. "The stations haven't been at normal price levels since 1967," he says. Price wars kept pump prices at artificially low levels, but gasoline prices had started to move up in recent weeks.

The suppliers and major oil companies are not giving dealers the signs and price request forms which are required under the current price freeze, Brawar added. He added that the Teamsters settlement will probably mean an additional cost to the dealer, and that this should be passed along to customers.

THE CURRENT average price level for gasoline is 40.9 cents a gallon for regular, 42.9 for no lead or low lead; and 44.9 cents for premium. If the freeze had not been imposed, these price levels would be approximately two cents a gallon higher than the present levels, he said.

Herbert Hugo, Midwest bureau chief for the Platt's Oilgram petroleum industry publication, says some dealers are hiking their pump prices despite the price freeze. Motorists in the Chicago area are faring better in terms of price than their counterparts in the East and West, he added.

Seek to pass 4-cent-per-gallon raise to consumer

Milk price increase to be first test of recent 'freeze'

by United Press International

Milk prices are scheduled to increase four cents a gallon in the Midwest on Sunday, but as things stand now, the consumer won't have to pay an extra penny.

Wholesale milk dealers — the middleman who buy from farmers and sell to retail stores — are fighting to change that. If they get their way, the full cost of the hike will be passed on to the shoppers.

The problem, according to the dairy farmers and the wholesalers, is this:

- Costs of feeding dairy cows have risen 48 per cent in the last year.
- To offset that, farmers in almost all states are asking for a 4-cent-per-gallon increase on the price of milk beginning Sunday.
- The cost increase normally would be passed from the farmer to the wholesaler to the retailer to the consumer. But because wholesale and retail prices are frozen for 60 days on President Nixon's orders, the cost hike stops with the wholesaler. Farmers are not included in the freeze, which ends in August.

Wholesalers say their profit margin is so low they will go out of business if they have to absorb the price hike, and they have asked the Cost of Living Council to allow them to pass on the increased costs.

RONALD W. BARTLETT, an agricultural economics professor at the University of Illinois in Urbana, says a study he made early this year confirms the wholesalers complaints.

"My study showed their margins are very, very low and so they have a right to squeal," he said.

Bartlett said it is unlikely, however, that any wholesalers would go out of business if they are only forced to carry the higher prices for the 60-day duration of the price freeze. But he said the best place for the cost hike to be absorbed is at the retail level where there is "a wider margin of profit than is necessary."

John Butterbrodt, president of the Associated Milk Producers, Inc., said the 40,000 midwestern farmers in his organization sympathize with the wholesalers, but cannot afford not to ask for a price hike.

Butterbrodt, whose organization covers 20 states and supplies most of Illinois' milk, said 1,300 dairy farms in Wisconsin have stopped production since January because of declining profits.

Soybean substitute developed. . .

URBANA, Ill. (UPI)—Three University of Illinois professors said Wednesday they have developed a drink made of soybeans that has a bland taste and offers all the nutrition benefits of milk — at about one-third the cost.

The new product, developed in the university's food science department, is off-white in color, "tastes like nothing" unless it is flavored and is not yet on the commercial market.

But several food marketing firms have expressed an interest in it, and the professors who developed it believe it could become "a new food for the world."

MARVIN STEINBERG, Lun-Shin Wei and Alvin Nelson said the drink was developed through a new processing procedure which takes the unpleasant taste and texture out of soybeans.

The resultant product can be made into a beverage, an oleo-like spread, a thick cream and a food-like yogurt.

Steinberg said the beverage could be marketed as a bland-tasting base or a pre-flavored pasteurized drink. It would last longer in the refrigerator than milk and cost about one-third the price — even considering the soaring price of soybeans.

And, he said, the soybean drink has as much protein as milk with calories equal to those in 2 per cent fat milk.

STEINBERG AND his codevelopers believe that the product can help alleviate the world protein shortage if it is first accepted on the United States market.

In many cultures, Steinberg said, milk has not been available for so long that area residents have developed a resistance to the lactose it contains and cannot drink it.

In some Oriental countries, soybean-based drink has served as a milk replacement, Wei said, but it does not have as much protein as milk or as the Illinois-developed product and does not taste so good.

The professors believe that if their soybean product is accepted in the United States, it will be accepted in other countries which need more protein foods.

Soybean export embargo 'too little and too late'

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Director Robert J. Williams of the Illinois Department of Agriculture calls the new mebargo on the export of soybeans "another example of too little, too late."

"Why now?" Williams asked after the Nixon administration announced an immediate embargo on the export of soybeans and soybean oil, as well as cotton oil and seeds.

Williams said the order probably will "soften" the price of soybeans, but comes too late in the season to increase soybean production in Illinois, the nation's leading producer of soybeans.

It is also too late, he said, to encourage more meat production this year, although the order might result in lower prices for livestock feed.

"The horse is long gone, and now they've slammed the door real hard," Williams said. "Well, it's just going to add a little to the discontent of farmers," he said.

Birth certificates available from county clerk's office

Parents of children starting school this fall are urged to get copies of their child's birth certificate this summer, Cook County Clerk Stanley Kusper said Friday.

Kusper's office in Chicago has certificates for all births in Cook County. Suburban residents can obtain the copies either by visiting the office at 130 N. Wells St., or by writing to the Bureau of Vital Statistics at that address.

Information needed either in person or in a letter seeking a copy of a birth certificate includes the name of the child, the date of birth, the father's name, the mother's maiden name, and the name of the hospital where the child was born.

The birth certificates can be mailed by return mail so that parents receive them within 48 hours if they write now and avoid the last minute rush in the fall, Kusper said.

Fees for copies of the certificates is $2 for the first copy and $1 for each additional copy requested at the same time.

Money orders for certificates ordered by mail should be made out to County Clerk Stanley T. Kusper Jr.

Dealers serve regular customers first

SORRY NO GAS

UNHAPPINESS IS a "no gas" sign for many motorists, the allocation plans of major oil companies are causing problems in buying gasoline. The price freeze is adding to the shortage problem, say some dealers.

by LEA TONKIN

Service station operators trying to stretch limited supplies of gasoline may be squeezing out the transient customer to stay in business.

This means motorists should keep their gasoline tanks half full when on vacation, or some distance from their regular service station, advised Pete Vanery, owner of the Tallyho Union 76 station in Arlington Heights. He has first-hand knowledge of the fuel shortage.

"I've been out of gasoline since Tuesday," Vanery said Thursday. "So I'm doing back room business only." He hopes to get a break from his supplier, an advance on his July allocation of gasoline, so he can resume sales this morning.

UNION OIL began an allocation program (limit on supply) in April, says Vanery. "But I never knew I was on allocation," he says. The company informed him in May of the 20 per cent cutback in gasoline supplies compared to last year's sales. "In May it hit me," he says, "so I had to borrow 5,000 gallons from the June allotment." This month has brought even more problems in meeting the demand for gas.

"All I want now is repeat business," Vanery continued. "I'm going to close whenever I'm likely to get transient business — Sundays, holidays, and nights." Vanery says he has a moral and financial obligation to serve his regular customers, even if this means closing early.

"My advice to customers is, start looking for gasoline whenever your tank is below half full. There's no place in the country where gasoline is unavailable," he added. "It's a matter of looking in the right place, and when you find gasoline, you grab it."

JAMES BRAWAR, administrator of the Illinois Service Station Operators Association, says most major brand dealers can decide how to ration their limited supplies, by operating fewer hours or limiting the amount of gasoline a customer can buy.

"It's a ticklish problem," he said, "because some dealers are afraid they'll run out over the July 4 weekend."

The Phase 3½ hunt for price violations by gasoline retailers is unfair, says Brawar, adding that this will contribute to the supply shortage. "The stations haven't been at normal price levels since 1967," he says. Price wars kept pump prices at artificially low levels, but gasoline prices had started to move up in recent weeks.

The suppliers and major oil companies are not giving dealers the signs and price request forms which are required under the current price freeze, Brawar added. He added that the Teamsters settlement will probably mean an additional cost to the dealer, and that this should be passed along to customers.

THE CURRENT average price level for gasoline is 40.9 cents a gallon for regular, 42.9 for no lead or low lead; and 44.9 cents for premium. If the freeze had not been imposed, these price levels would be approximately two cents a gallon higher than the present levels, he said.

Herbert Hugo, Midwest bureau chief for the Platt's Oilgram petroleum industry publication, says some dealers are hiking their pump prices despite the price freeze. Motorists in the Chicago area are faring better in terms of price than their counterparts in the East and West, he added.

Seek to pass 4-cent-per-gallon raise to consumer

Milk price increase to be first test of recent 'freeze'

by United Press International

Milk prices are scheduled to increase four cents a gallon in the Midwest on Sunday, but as things stand now, the consumer won't have to pay an extra penny.

Wholesale milk dealers — the middleman who buy from farmers and sell to retail stores — are fighting to change that. If they get their way, the full cost of the hike will be passed on to the shoppers.

The problem, according to the dairy farmers and the wholesalers, is this:

- Costs of feeding dairy cows have risen 48 per cent in the last year.
- To offset that, farmers in almost all states are asking for a 4-cent-per-gallon increase on the price of milk beginning Sunday.
- The cost increase normally would be passed from the farmer to the wholesaler to the retailer to the consumer. But because wholesale and retail prices are frozen for 60 days on President Nixon's orders, the cost hike stops with the wholesaler. Farmers are not included in the freeze, which ends in August.

Wholesalers say their profit margin is so low they will go out of business if they have to absorb the price hike, and they have asked the Cost of Living Council to allow them to pass on the increased costs.

RONALD W. BARTLETT, an agricultural economics professor at the University of Illinois in Urbana, says a study he made early this year confirms the wholesalers complaints.

42 attorneys added to Carey's staff

The Cook County Board of Commissioners approved adding 42 full-time attorneys to the staff of State's Atty. Bernard Carey at a special meeting yesterday.

All 42 of the new assistant state's attorneys will be assigned to criminal court duties. One new assistant will be assigned to each of the five suburban court districts.

The additions will cost the county an additional $600,000 during the next fiscal year. This year the state's attorney's office will be able to stay within its budget because it has had vacancies for a major portion of the year which are becoming filled only recently, Ralph Berkowitz, special assistant to Carey said yesterday.

Berkowitz said the additions will bring the state's attorney's office up to a total staff of 206 lawyers.

THE COUNTY board action yesterday which allowed the hiring of the new lawyers was a transfer of $350,000 from one fund in the state's attorney's office to another.

At a meeting last week Carey's proposal for the additional staff received the support from Herbert Barsy, chairman of the criminal law committee of the Chicago Bar Association.

Barsy said the additional men would eliminate the backlogs in circuit court. He told the county board the 164 assistant state's attorney's in Cook County handled civil, criminal, appeals and traffic cases, while in Los Angeles County, 534 assistant state's attorney's handle only criminal cases.

Carey said yesterday the county board action, "will enable the state's attorney's office to attract and retain quality assistants."

WHILE NOTING the increase in crime and the insufficiency of his staff had been a "severe handicap," Carey pointed to the "extraordinary success" of his office in obtaining convictions in the George Jayne murder trial and in prosecuting rape cases.

Berkowitz explained the 42 new lawyers will be assigned as follows:

- Fifteen to the existing criminal courtrooms to provide a staff of three assistant state's attorneys in each courtroom. The assignments are designed to eliminate wasted courtroom time while the assistants are preparing cases for trial. That addition alone will result in a "35 per cent greater use of courtrooms" and will be equivalent to adding five additional criminal courtrooms, Berkowitz said.
- Six additional attorneys to the criminal appeals division.
- Five additional attorneys to the five suburban court districts to bring each suburban district up to a total of two assistant state's attorneys and to increase the time allotted for case preparation.
- Five more to the juvenile court,
- Two more to traffic court in Chicago,
- Three more to courtrooms in the first district police station at 11th and State streets in Chicago, and,
- Six more to Chicago police districts to review felony cases on an around-the-clock basis in conjunction with Chicago Police.

JUST-4-KICKS

There will be a free exhibition dance on Wednesday, July 4, at the Hoffman Estates 4th of July celebration from 1 to 3 p.m. It will be held behind the fire station in Chino Park, which is located on Flagstaff, Evanston and Illinois streets in Hoffman Estates.

Cliff Benson will be calling the squares and all area dancers are invited to participate.

Plan to attend the free dance to be held at the Woodfield Commons on Meacham and Golf roads sometime in late July. Final date will be announced later.

HAPPY TWIRLERS

Happy Twirlers dance every Thursday night in the air-conditioned hall of the Des Plaines Elks Club, 495 Lee St. The recent "easy square dance rounds of the month" are reviewed from 8 to 8:30 p.m. Intermediate (plus) dancing starts at 8:30 p.m. and is interrupted for a short workshop session about 9:30 p.m. Char-Lee Weilers are the callers and round dance teachers.

Happy Twirlers, originators of the D. & C. (dance and contribute) Movement Program, have already "contributed" nearly $2100.00 since Jan. 1, 1973, to area churches; the American Cancer Society and the Elks Building Fund. They live up to their motto, "Square dancers do more than just dance."

The Happy Twirler extended basic class at the St. John's Episcopal Church in Mount Prospect will receive their diplomas Sunday night, July 1. All members have unanimously decided to continue their training with the "extended" and other popular experimental basics every Sunday night thru July. The class will move to the air-conditioned hall of the Trinity Lutheran Church, 675 W. Algonquin Rd. in Des Plaines, July 8, where the "beginner class" will also continue every Friday night throughout the summer. For more information, call 824-1464.

Transportation study worthless

The long-awaited and long-delayed transportation study commissioned by the Northwest Municipal Conference is a waste of time and money and an embarrassment to anyone who seriously wants to seek answers to the very real transportation dilemma of the Northwest suburbs.

The study, done under the auspices of the College of Urban Sciences of the University of Illinois, Circle Campus, and Harper College is a sham; it purports to be a serious study of suburban transportation when in reality it reads like a college term paper. At best, we would give it a "D".

For this neatly bound document, the Northwest Municipal conference paid some $27,000 — an amount gathered by assessing participating communities 10 cents per capita. Worse, the $27,000 has been paid despite the fact that the study — although worthless — is two years late.

The study was commissioned in 1970 and scheduled for completion in the fall of 1971. Despite anguish on the part of suburban public officials, research dragged on and on, past any reasonable expectation of timeliness. Member communities did receive a computer printout which was the basis for the final report, but the value of the printout is doubtful since it contains only raw data.

The tragedy of this however, is not solely in the length of time it took to complete. Instead, the real crime is the adolescent treatment given transportation.

Chapter 2, for example, begins like this:

> "Transportation plays two complimentary roles in contemporary American life . . . transportation makes individuals and material mobile. Through transportation, either people, who are relatively immobile if left afoot, or raw materials or manufactured products which are inert, can be moved about."

Sounds like something a college freshman would write in a blue book, doesn't it?

And then again in Chapter 3:

> "The transportation system within the (suburbs) is used by three groups of people: the individuals who live in the (suburbs), the individuals who come to the (suburbs) for whatever reasons, and those who are merely passing through."

But even if the study's authors can be excused for some muddle-headed writing, no one can be excused for the shallow and useless recommendations made by the study.

Boiled down from the pages and pages of verbiage, the $27,000 study makes three suggestions for the transportation crisis besetting the suburbs.

The study recommends 1) the formation of car pools, 2) the creation of bus services from outlying areas to the train stations, something not exactly new out here, and 3) development of a flow of reverse commuters who go from the city out to the suburbs for work. This last recommendation the study admits is not within the power of suburbs, anyway.

That's it. The loss of $27,000 and two years of waiting for a study which virtually every election official, traffic cop or newspaper reporter could have written in a weekend.

We must hasten to say the fault here is not with the members of the Northwest Municipal Conference, a body which we still support firmly.

The fault is with academians who bind several hundred pages of gobbledygook in a fancy binder and call it a study.

They ought to fire the guy who wrote it.

We're growing older

We, the people of the United States, are growing older. According to a recent Census Bureau report:

—Today about 20.6 million Americans are 65 years of age and up, and the number is increasing by 300,000 to 400,000 a year.

—The number of people over 65 will rise sharply between the years 2010 and 2020 when the World War II "baby boom" becomes an "elderly boom."

—The proportion of people 65 to 69 is declining, while the proportion of those 75 and older is growing.

The time is coming, says one gerontologist, when more than half our population will be over 65, a fact which is going to have major impact on many of our institutions and customs.

Now the premium is on being young, notes Mary M. Sequin of Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, who is one of a growing number of persons with doctorates in the field of gerontology, the study of aging.

But when the population shifts begin to occur — caused by a combination of medical advances and a declining birth rate — the premium will be on being older, she predicts. "The focus on power and values will shift."

She foresees one major problem area in the economy, especially the job market, as technology eliminates jobs and we are forced to keep lowering the age of retirement to make room for new entrants.

One possible solution might be for people to work in five-year cycles. They would take a year or more off after each cycle, giving opportunities for more people to be employed.

Americans over 65 are the new "pioneers," says Dr. Sequin. Before, not many people lived to a ripe old age, and those few older people were incorporated in the general population without anything special needing to be done about their special needs or problems.

"Today we have a large number of people in this group for the first time. They are pioneering new roles — being retired, being great-grandparents."

Supports 'Old Town'

On June 14, the Schaumburg Herald ran an article in which Mrs. Marilyn R. Lind discussed the early history of Schaumburg Township and how there has always existed dissension among the residents, long before Schaumburg or Hoffman Estates existed as villages.

While the article as a whole was very interesting, we feel that Mrs. Lind is mistaken when she states that the creation of a Schaumburg "Old Town" area would result in a "new wedge" of dissension between the Villages of Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg. All that the "Old Town" concept is meant to do is to preserve for all of the residents of the Northwest suburbs a small part of the cultural heritage of the area, a heritage which has been almost completely overrun by new residential subdivisions and commercial developments.

We are truly amazed that Mrs. Lind would look upon the efforts of our committee, efforts which have included many hours of meetings and studying various city ordinances from around the nation as being an attempt to keep alive the conflict between Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates. Rather, we would suggest that it is people like Mrs. Lind, who look for conflict and disputes even where there are none, who are creating a "new wedge" of dissension.

'We need Senior Council'

Since the ninth of May when at the meeting in the village hall, the representatives of six senior clubs attending, a decision to form a Senior Citizens Council was adopted, nothing constructive has been done to implement this vital decision. This council is needed to coordinate senior citizens activities and manage the moneys that may become available through donations, grants or budgeting by the village.

I was looking forward that the village hall — either Marjorie Boswell's or Mayor Robert Teichert's office — will issue some guidelines in organizing the Senior Citizens Council (SCC) and ascribe to it certain official duties. For I believe that such an important thing should be done to the finish. Like Bernard Gilpin, a famous English Chergyman, so wisely stated: "I hate to see things done by halves. If it be right, do it boldly; if it be wrong, leave it undone."

Forming SCC is too vital a thing to be left undone. There is an urgent need for a central leadership in our continuously growing senior citizens community. At present we have eight separate clubs, and I heard a rumor that a new one is being organized. We extend a warm welcome to whatsoever its name may be.

Too often, under the present set-up, the activities of one club clash with those of another. This leads to friction and dissension between the clubs. The SCC could help to avoid these misunderstandings by better planning.

The recent uproar by some senior citizens clubs over $2,500 which the village had budgeted to the seniors and named the Extensioneers as a recipient. In the absence of a central body, the village administration had no other choice, for the Extensioneers is, in reality, the representative senior citizens organization. Consequently, the village froze the money, and it will stay frozen until the SCC is formed and invested with the authority to manage the funds.

There are other areas to which the SCC could expand its activities that would benefit a great many seniors. These need not be discussed now. First, let's organize the Senior Citizens Council and set it into motion. Perhaps, another meeting of the club representatives would be in order. Marjorie Boswell, Mayor Robert Teichert and Joseph Grittani might have some fresh ideas to incorporate into the council's make-up.

True, at May 9 meeting it was decided that the council will consist of the delegates from different clubs elected at their regular meetings, and that each club, regardless the number of delegates, will have only one vote. So, it still has to be decided how many delegates each club may send to the council. In all fairness, the large club should be entitled to a larger representation than a mini club.

One more thing. Since the village is providing some funds for the senior citizens, it should have a representative in council. Not to act as a watchdoggie over how the money is being spent, but as an adviser and mediator in cases of disagreement between the delegates of different clubs.

There are more things that could be said in favor of the Senior Citizens Council. But what has already been said should convince everybody how important a role it may play in the lives of all seniors. So let's not waste any more time in putting this body together.

Lauds Buffalo Grove paramedics

Hats off to the most efficient, dedicated group of men, the paramedics of Buffalo Grove. One of our customers was stricken, and we called the operator for help. Both operators, the telephone company, as well as the fire department, are certainly well trained for emergencies, they too were the greatest. The phone was no sooner replaced when the police were on the scene, minutes later the corps of men took over.

Effectively, compassionately and medically are words best suited for these men. But words cannot completely convey our gratitude to all who help in this emergency. Needless to say the gentleman in question is feeling better due in part to the advance treatment he received on the way to the hospital.

We sure are in good hands with the paramedics of Buffalo Grove.

'Palatine needs pumper truck'

I read about the free garbage bags in lieu of the overtaxation. I also read about the new fire pumper Palatine would like to purchase but has insufficient funds.

Why not apply the money in question towards a fire pumper? This way all residents would benefit equally from the added protection and thus a fairer distribution. This would save interest costs for the pumper. Our fire department is doing a good job, let's cooperate.

'God impartial'

I read your article "Faith healer brings his ministry to Northwest suburbs" by Mary Houlihan and was heartsick. If testimonies and healing only belong to the South and not to Mount Prospect, then I call upon our Southern brothers to start praying for us. The God I serve is not partial, but loving and just, and heals all that believe.

Why is it that we can jump up and down when someone on our bowling team makes a strike, clap, shout and do handstands when our star football player makes a touchdown, but let someone praise the Lord or sing with up-lifted hands and suddenly we are too intelligent for that kind of foolishness. I like what the Apostle Paul says, "I'm a fool for Christ's sake, whose fool are you?"

As for Miss Houlihan's skeptic view of healing, to doubt is to put a limit on God and He has no limits. The Bible says, Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and forever. Heb. 13:8. That is enough for me. It tells me Jesus is alive and the same right now!

I hope you print this letter because I was at Randhurst and praise the Lord for Donald Odon, one of God's servants.

George Wallace 'out' nationally

by BRUCE BIOSSAT

Probably Gov. George Wallace will never again mount a serious national campaign effort, though he is a strong bet to run and win re-election as governor of Alabama in 1974.

He moves gamely about the country from time to time since a would-be assassin's bullets struck him 13 months ago, paralyzing him from the waist down and leaving him with several other body wounds.

George Wallace

For awhile he can get the adrenalin up for a nationally televised panel show or a big press conference, as he did at the national governors conference in early June at Lake Tahoe. But the limits upon him are severe.

In more casual conversation, his voice consistently betrays pain. He keeps remarkable command of himself while in any sort of public view, but he tires fairly quickly. His old zestful jousting with newsmen, which they enjoyed as much as he, is wholly absent. Those who have covered governorship and presidential campaigns with him for years sadly conclude that he just doesn't have it in him.

The Alabama legislature, which needs the strong hand, has been in session since early May and has accomplished almost nothing. It haggled for six weeks before finally passing a minor measure authorizing higher pay for legislative clerks.

A few court-mandated actions have been taken, and it has managed one negative achievement, the defeat of the pending U.S. equal rights amendment affecting women. But all parts of Wallace's state budget are bogged down.

With four-year colleges, junior college and trade schools competing sharply for a prospective $1 billion in state educational funds, Wallace in a master stroke named a joint commission to work out the conflicts. The legislature since has chopped its recommendations to pieces, and not a penny has been voted for the new fiscal year.

Without his firm touch, without a well-enunciated policy program pushed hard, the Alabama lawmakers are expected to dawdle through most of a session which could last until September. State budget measures may just get under the final wire.

Most likely Wallace can blame all this on the legislators and it won't hurt him in Alabama. But their unguided performance will be a gauge on his energies available for larger tasks.

His only real competition for the governorship next year comes from former Democratic Gov. Albert Brewer, whom he defeated in a hard primary in 1970. Brewer had succeeded to the office upon the mid-term death of Wallace's first wife, Lurleen, who won the post in the days when an Alabama governor could not have a second straight term.

The word is that Brewer is prepared to wage a bitter fight, but that Wallace, virtually on sympathy alone, could beat him from his front porch.

Going for the presidency in 1976 is something altogether apart. The governor still makes brave talk about it. But anyone who closely watches his pain-ridden public outings, and times them, can guess sensibly that the big campaign ordeal is well beyond his tragically limited capacities.

Lauds Buffalo Grove paramedics

Hats off to the most efficient, dedicated group of men, the paramedics of Buffalo Grove. One of our customers was stricken, and we called the operator for help. Both operators, the telephone company, as well as the fire department, are certainly well trained for emergencies, they too were the greatest. The phone was no sooner replaced when the police were on the scene, minutes later the corps of men took over.

Effectively, compassionately and medically are words best suited for these men. But words cannot completely convey our gratitude to all who help in this emergency. Needless to say the gentleman in question is feeling better due in part to the advance treatment he received on the way to the hospital.

We sure are in good hands with the paramedics of Buffalo Grove.

'Palatine needs pumper truck'

I read about the free garbage bags in lieu of the overtaxation. I also read about the new fire pumper Palatine would like to purchase but has insufficient funds.

Why not apply the money in question towards a fire pumper? This way all residents would benefit equally from the added protection and thus a fairer distribution. This would save interest costs for the pumper. Our fire department is doing a good job, let's cooperate.

'God impartial'

I read your article "Faith healer brings his ministry to Northwest suburbs" by Mary Houlihan and was heartsick. If testimonies and healing only belong to the South and not to Mount Prospect, then I call upon our Southern brothers to start praying for us. The God I serve is not partial, but loving and just, and heals all that believe.

Why is it that we can jump up and down when someone on our bowling team makes a strike, clap, shout and do handstands when our star football player makes a touchdown, but let someone praise the Lord or sing with up-lifted hands and suddenly we are too intelligent for that kind of foolishness. I like what the Apostle Paul says, "I'm a fool for Christ's sake, whose fool are you?"

As for Miss Houlihan's skeptic view of healing, to doubt is to put a limit on God and He has no limits. The Bible says, Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and forever. Heb. 13:8. That is enough for me. It tells me Jesus is alive and the same right now!

I hope you print this letter because I was at Randhurst and praise the Lord for Donald Odon, one of God's servants.

George Wallace 'out' nationally

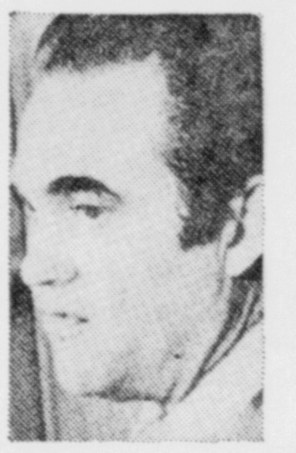
by BRUCE BIOSSAT

Probably Gov. George Wallace will never again mount a serious national campaign effort, though he is a strong bet to run and win re-election as governor of Alabama in 1974.

He moves gamely about the country from time to time since a would-be assassin's bullets struck him 13 months ago, paralyzing him from the waist down and leaving him with several other body wounds.



George Wallace

For awhile he can get the adrenalin up for a nationally televised panel show or a big press conference, as he did at the national governors conference in early June at Lake Tahoe. But the limits upon him are severe.

In more casual conversation, his voice consistently betrays pain. He keeps remarkable command of himself while in any sort of public view, but he tires fairly quickly. His old zestful jousting with newsmen, which they enjoyed as much as he, is wholly absent. Those who have covered governorship and presidential campaigns with him for years sadly conclude that he just doesn't have it in him.

The Alabama legislature, which needs the strong hand, has been in session since early May and has accomplished almost nothing. It haggled for six weeks before finally passing a minor measure authorizing higher pay for legislative clerks.

A few court-mandated actions have been taken, and it has managed one negative achievement, the defeat of the pending U.S. equal rights amendment affecting women. But all parts of Wallace's state budget are bogged down.

With four-year colleges, junior college and trade schools competing sharply for a prospective $1 billion in state educational funds, Wallace in a master stroke named a joint commission to work out the conflicts. The legislature since has chopped its recommendations to pieces, and not a penny has been voted for the new fiscal year.

Without his firm touch, without a well-enunciated policy program pushed hard, the Alabama lawmakers are expected to dawdle through most of a session which could last until September. State budget measures may just get under the final wire.

Most likely Wallace can blame all this on the legislators and it won't hurt him in Alabama. But their unguided performance will be a gauge on his energies available for larger tasks.

His only real competition for the governorship next year comes from former Democratic Gov. Albert Brewer, whom he defeated in a hard primary in 1970. Brewer had succeeded to the office upon the mid-term death of Wallace's first wife, Lurleen, who won the post in the days when an Alabama governor could not have a second straight term.

The word is that Brewer is prepared to wage a bitter fight, but that Wallace, virtually on sympathy alone, could beat him from his front porch.

Going for the presidency in 1976 is something altogether apart. The governor still makes brave talk about it. But anyone who closely watches his pain-ridden public outings, and times them, can guess sensibly that the big campaign ordeal is well beyond his tragically limited capacities.

DETROIT — The 1974 Mustang II, a completely redesigned sporty car, will be powered by a 140 cubic inch engine. To be more exact, it's a 2.3 liter power plant, the first mass-produced metric system engine in America.

To avoid confusion in many minds, Ford's general specifications for the new engine are expressed in both metric and English equivalents. The piston stroke of the four-cylinder engine is either 79.4 milimeters or 3.781 inches.

Sounds confusing, doesn't it? For most Americans, as the United States slowly switches to the system of measurement used in most of the world, the next few years will be rather trying. One Ford executive can already vouch for that.

Trying to explain to newsmen recently that he's begun to think metric, he said his car gets about 10 liters to the kilometer. That's like saying your car gets about three gallons to the mile.

BUT, SAYS Thomas J. Feaheny, general manager of Ford's Engine Division, the problem of building a new engine with unfamiliar measurements wasn't as bad as expected.

"Frankly, we overestimate the problem of converting to metric," he told newsmen on a recent tour of the Lima, Ohio, Engine Plant where the new engine is being built.

The man on the assembly line, says Feaheny, doesn't care if he's using a three-quarter inch or 19 millimeter wrench to tighten a bolt. It's the same operation.

The experience gained in expanding the Lima Engine plant and installing a new engine line points up some of the difficulties U.S. automakers would face if they decided to switch to a different type of engine.

"WE USED all the experience and ingenuity at our command, yet from the time we went to the drawing board in Dearborn until the first customer takes delivery of a Mustang II with a 2.3-liter engine, 36 months will have passed," he said.

Feaheny estimated that 5 million skilled man hours of work went into development and construction of the engine and plant to build it.

"I emphasize the word skilled," he said. "I mean engineering talent and every conceivable skilled trade. The type of labor required is not available in unlimited numbers."

'No food shortages this year': study

There will be no massive food shortages across the nation this year, according to a survey by United Press International, but beef, chicken and fruit may be in short supply — and expensive.

Farmers, ranchers and orchardmen complained they could not sell their produce because the current 60-day freeze fixes food prices below production costs, and distributors and processors cannot pay them enough to make a profit.

"Processors and buyers of raw agricultural products are holding out because of the imposed retail freeze and some products may not be harvested as a result," said Alan Grant, president of the California Farm Bureau.

"Broiler and egg producers are cutting back because of operating losses," he said. "Meat and dairy commodities may be similarly affected, and the overall result could be less food for public consumption."

Despite the industry's arguments, however, the government's Cost of Living Council Wednesday ruled that chicken producers won't be allowed to raise prices, industry sources said.

A KEY FACTOR in meat and poultry prices is soybean meal, the export of which was halted in an emergency move Wednesday — "because of the extremely tight supply situation," according to Commerce Secretary Frederick Dent.

In Independence, Iowa, Louis Sandbouef, president of Corn Blossom Foods, said the firm's three meat packing plants are "caught in the squeeze on price ceilings" and will close within the week.

Egg rancher Marshall Ellis of Riverside, Calif., said, "If we can't purchase feed, we will then have to either kill them or let them starve. And if we reduce our stock, we will have to reduce our staff on the ranch."

There were reports of chicks slaughtered or eggs destroyed in Mississippi, Missouri, Washington state, Georgia and Texas.

A new soybean crop would go far to make the feed shortage problem less serious, according to R. J. Hodges of the Texas Extension Service, but he said it would not come before early August.

HOWEVER, he added, "I doubt it will help the overall feed situation very much. The demand is so far ahead of the supply."

Eighteen months ago soybean prices were $3 and $3.50 a bushel. They have since climbed to $6 a bushel and even higher in some areas. In Tokyo, the prices of soybeans went up by more than $7 after the U.S. export ban was announced.

The price freeze will hurt the fruit and vegetable market, according to O. W. Fillerup, a spokesman for the Council of California Growers, producers of much of the nation's crop.

Tomatoes, carrots, potatoes and grapefruit were at low price levels during the week the freeze was imposed, he said, and "now, producers of high quality products aren't allowed to receive what their products are worth in the open market."

Some areas reported no shortages or fears of shortages, among them Kansas, where a record wheat harvest is going smoothly, according to a state spokesman. Fears that a shortage of gasoline would interfere with harvesting have not been borne out, he said.

Antitrust suits may sever oil company monopolies

If the government forces the major oil companies to separate their oil drilling and refining interests from their filling stations, some oil companies think it would reduce competition and in the long run mean even higher prices.

But James T. Halverson, director of the Federal Trade Commission's bureau of competition, and Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., who has introduced legislation to prohibit oil firms from marketing refined oil products, say the opposite is the case.

The two sides were in sharp disagreement Wednesday and set the scene for a court fight reminiscent of that involving the major Hollywood film studios 30 years ago, when the motion picture-makers were forced to sell off their large chains of movie theaters.

BUT SEVERAL oil company spokesman said off the record that their industry is based on different conditions — and in any case has vastly more power than Hollywood ever had.

Halverson said the structure of the oil industry — whereby huge companies get the oil from the earth, refine it, and then market it in retail gas stations — is anti-competitive and has helped create the gasoline shortage.

Halverson, testifying before a Senate judiciary subcommittee, said the oil industry is so "highly concentrated at the refinery level" that there are "overwhelming" barriers to smaller firms trying to break into the refinery business.

He hinted — but did not actually say — that his staff would recommend an antitrust suit against the major oil firms. The Washington Star-News reported such a suit against eight firms would be recommended.

Don't destroy shrubs to plant garden

Q. "How can I grow some of my own vegetables, such as lettuce and tomatoes for salads, on our lot? Most of our land is planted in shrubs or borders around our house. Should I tear out some of the perennials and plant vegetables?

A. A surprising variety and quantity of fresh garden food can be grown around the edges of your shrubs. For example, planta 4 to 6-inch band of lettuce, carrots and radishes in front or back of low growing shrubs — right along the edge of any grass. Or, stake up tomatoes along a fence, in front of south-facing windows, or back of plantings that are spaced apart enough for sunlight to penetrate. Patio tomatoes can be grown in your planter boxes or a deck instead of bedding plants.

Instead of planting annuals in borders, sow beets, radishes, or onions and fertilize heavily. A producing vegetable garden can be planted at least twice during the growing season in most areas — right along with colorful shrubs and trees.

Q. "I was recently married and had a number of credit cards. When I asked that my credit cards in my maiden name be reissued in my married name, my cards were terminated. I was told I would have to use my husband's cards and was issued new cards with his name. Why can't I get credit in my own name? Men don't have to reapply for credit when they marry; why should I?"

A. Rules and policies affecting credit for women are currently in a turmoil. Department stores, oil companies, bank credit card departments, and others issuing credit are changing some rules and not others — and with little consistency.

Discrimination against single women, widows, and married women wishing to establish credit for themselves alone when they work and have their own funds has been widespread and applied without much rhyme or reason. But, things are changing. Washington passed what is apparently one of the first state laws in the U.S. prohibiting credit discrimination due to sex or marital status.

In answer to your specific question — newly married women must apply for new cards simply because their names are changed. When men marry, they should supply creditors with updated information and any new address — but not all follow through. Other states are likely to follow Washington's example soon.

Q. "I don't buy or sell stocks often, but each time I pay a broker's fee. Since these represent an expense associated with investing, why are these fees not deductible?"

A. While brokers' fees may not be deducted directly, you gain a deduction indirectly. When you purchase stock, fees are added in calculating your basis cost. When you sell, the fee is subtracted from the sale price. Therefore, any gain is reduced by the effect of both fees, and any losses are increased similarly.

Other fees associated with investing are deductible, such as — rental cost of safe deposit box for storing securities, office expense specifically related to investing, cost of advice or counsel including subscription to advisory services, and fees paid to a bank or service organization for managing stock or collecting dividends.

Q. "Even though I had attached a label to my bag, it disappeared on a trip East. It was returned two days lateer, fortunately — but the name and address label had been ripped off. What can I do to keep from losing my bags? How much would I have been paid if they hadn't found my bag?

A. Identification tags sometimes are torn off through rough handling — as yours was, apparently. With so many people traveling, many bags look alike. Frequent travelers use ribbons clamped between the edges of the opening but allowed to flutter a couple of inches to identify their bags.

Or, they attach circles or half-moons — preferably with a press-on adhesive rather than the moistened type. Such touches help to keep strangers from inadvertently picking up your bag if it looks similar to theirs.

To speed identification if an outside tag is lost, include your name and address inside. If your bag is lost, airlines will pay up to $500 per passenger on domestic flights or $7.50 per pound on international flights. But, you must establish the value of lost goods.

If you should check three bags and lose one, you would be paid only for the value of the goods lost in the one bag. You can buy added protection by declaring excess value when you check in — 10 cents per $100 on domestic and 15 cents per $100 on international flights.

A. Identification tags sometimes are torn off through rough handling — as yours was, apparently. With so many people traveling, many bags look alike. Frequent travelers use ribbons clamped between the edges of the opening but allowed to flutter a couple of inches to identify their bags.

Or, they attach circles or half-moons — preferably with a press-on adhesive rather than the moistened type. Such touches help to keep strangers from inadvertently picking up your bag if it looks similar to theirs.

To speed identification if an outside tag is lost, include your name and address inside. If your bag is lost, airlines will pay up to $500 per passenger on domestic flights or $7.50 per pound on international flights. But, you must establish the value of lost goods.

If you should check three bags and lose one, you would be paid only for the value of the goods lost in the one bag. You can buy added protection by declaring excess value when you check in — 10 cents per $100 on domestic and 15 cents per $100 on international flights.

Harper land bid sent to Arlington bd.

The Harper College request that land on Palatine and Schoenbeck roads in Arlington Heights be set aside for a possible second campus will be referred to the Arlington Heights Village Board without a definite recommendation from the plan commission.

The plan commission voted four to one with three passes in favor of designating the land as a Harper site on the village master plan following a public hearing Wednesday.

However, because a majority of the commission did not vote in favor of the request commission chairman O. V. Anderson said the village board "will have no recommendation from us."

During the hearing, officials of Harper College explained that their enrollment projections show that they will have enough students to require a second campus. Officials from the Mayo Foundation, operators of the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., and owners of the land, asked the plan commission to deny the Harper request.

IF THE LAND is designated for a Harper site, any request from a private developer to build on the land would be held up for a year from the time of his request so the college could buy the land, according to Illinois law.

William Mann, Harper College vice president of business affairs, told the commission the college board had studied several parcels of land and had decided the site was the most suitable.

Before the site can be purchased, according to Mann, the college must obtain permission from the Illinois Junior College Board and the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

The board of higher education has held up Harper's request for a second campus until it can complete a study of enrollments and needs for all state colleges.

OFFICIALS FOR the Mayo Foundation said they oppose the Harper request because of the chances for lengthy delay before the college will know whether it can buy the land.

The foundation is paying $4,000 a year more in taxes than the rent it receives from the owners of the land and wants to sell the land quickly so the proceeds can be invested to provide income for the foundation's medical education and research programs, according to Karl Ladner, Mayo treasurer.

Gregg Orwoll, attorney for Mayo, said the foundation is sympathetic with Harper with Harper needs, but added, "We think there is considerable doubt that a second campus is going to be developed at all."

Orwoll also said that although Mayo could still sell the land if it were set aside for Harper on he master plan, the price the foundation would receive for the land would probably be lower.

ORWOLL SAID the foundation is concerned because "We need to liquidate our assets in the Northwest suburbs as soon as possible." He said the foundation has received several tentative offers for portions of the land since it received it through a donation in December. One offer, he said, was $42,000 an acre for part of the 146 acre tract.

Comr. Norman Breyer said he was concerned by Mayo's attitude, saying, "I'm a little bothered by this mercenary approach from a foundation that receives a tax exemption."

Comr. Madeline Schoeder, who served as a member of a Harper citizen's committee suggested the college study the possibility of a second campus, said she felt there are many uncertainties about the need for the site, including enrollment projections and possible future growth of the Harper district.

SHE SAID THE citizen's committee had recommended a citizen's task force be formed to further study the second site possibility and added she was "dismayed" that the college had gone ahead with planning without doing that.

"Perhaps we should take a little more time to look at the factors involved," she said.

Anderson said he was concerned about the Harper request because no study had been done on the impact of additional traffic on Palatine and Schoenbeck after the site is developed. In addition, he said he was concerned because three elementary schools are located directly across the street from the proposed site.

On the final vote, Comr. Leo Mueller voted against the request and Anderson, Mrs. Schroeder and Russell Colvin passed. Colvin said he has a relative studying medicine at Mayo, in explaining his vote.

Biker peddles safety tips

By United Press International

Keith Kingbay pedals bicycles 7,500 miles a year — and peddles bicycle safety wherever and whenever he can. The 59-year-old cyclist calls bicycle safety efforts in the United States "a farce."

"You see too many cyclists going the wrong way in a one-way street," he said in an interview. "Too many wear dark clothes at night and operate bikes without lights. They don't stop at stop signs or stoplights, and the police don't bother to enforce these violations."

KINGBAY, however, doesn't blame only police. "It's the whole society. No one wants to enforce laws against cyclists," he said.

"What cyclists don't realize — and what a lot of police and other authorities fail to emphasize — is that traffic laws for motorists apply to cyclists, too.

"Traffic laws were written for a purpose — safety. Violating them is just as dangerous for a cyclist as it is for a motorist. The law should be the same for both."

Kingbay, who is a traveling goodwill man for the Schwinn Bicycle Co., of Chicago, said the highest accident rate among cyclists — 87 per cent — occurs in the under-14 age group.

"And, it's almost always a flagrant violation," he said.

KINGBAY SAID a bicycle education program recently developed by the National Safety Council NSC is one step in the right direction. The NSC program is in pamphlet form and available on request at minimal cost.

"The Illinois Department of Education also has put together a program that is very thorough and effective," Kingbay said. This program is actually a course available at no cost to any public school in the state requesting it.

"But none of them is any good unless they're put into effect where they'll do the most good," he said. "What's really needed is a big effort by parents and teachers and other similar groups interested in the well-being of the youngsters to get the schools involved in safety programs."

The Lighter Side... by Dick West

Are calories truly stronger than smut?

Dick West

WASHINGTON — It is being widely and freely predicted that the new Supreme Court guidelines on obscenity will result in a nationwide crackdown on pornography.

I doubt it. Let's review the background.

In 1957, the justices decided that obscene material couldn't be legally suppressed unless it was "utterly without redeeming social values."

This was tantamount to giving everyone in America a license to print French postcards.

After thinking it over for 16 years, the court has now decided that obscenity need only lack "serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value" to justify legal action.

THEORETICALLY, the new definition makes it easier for prosecutors to obtain convictions in pornography cases. But that interpretation overlooks a loophole big enough to show a Linda Lovelace movie through.

Suppose it can be shown that a bawdy book, a skin flick or some other pornographic work may be lacking in serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value but it will help you lose weight?

Is that not an extenuating factor? Does it not constitute a strong argument for leaving the book in circulation?

The reason I am asking these questions is because, coincident with the new Supreme Court obscenity opinion, Bantam Books has published a paperback edition of "How Sex Can Keep You Slim."

In this book, a Dr. Abraham I. Friedman reports that the vast majority of persons who overeat do so because of emotional problems, tensions and anxieties.

THE GOOD DOCTOR further avers that such problems often are caused by sexual hangups and frustrations.

The sexual drive is diverted into appetite. Food becomes a substitute for sex. Ergo, according to Friedman, many persons can lose weight through increased sexual activity.

Now let us consider that the chief rap against pornography is that it appeals to "prurient interests." Which is to say it may be sexually stimulating.

Do you see the problem this poses for the prosecution?

When a skin-flick case comes to trial, one of the defense witnesses turns out to be a chubby individual who testifies that the film helped him get his mind off food.

Chances are half of the jurors are on a diet themselves. Do you think for one minute they are going to bring in a guilty verdict?

Of course not. Where human feelings are concerned, calories are stronger than smut.

Air Force Reservists mark completion of active duty

The steak was tough but so were the stern-faced officers of the Air Force Reserve unit who held an open house Tuesday at their O'Hare Airport headquarters.

The occasion was the completion of two weeks of active duty for members of the 928th Tactical Airlift Group, Air Force Reserve. Officials from several villages attended the luncheon and toured the facilities.

Introduced at the luncheon was the unit's new commanding officer, Lt. Col. Sloan R. Gill, a 20-year military veteran who recently served as commander of the 908th Tactical Air Support Group at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama.

Visitors were told of the most important functions of the reserves, which includes delivering troops, supplies and men with technical knowhow to needy areas in the U.S. or other countries.

The tour included the display of the C-130, a plane which officials said does everything from refueling to carrying NASA missile cones to delivering pigs and cattle to Southeast Asia.

The unit has 250 men, including pilots, maintenance personnel and other military specialists.

The Lighter Side . . . by Dick West

Are calories truly stronger than smut?

Dick West

WASHINGTON — It is being widely and freely predicted that the new Supreme Court guidelines on obscenity will result in a nationwide crackdown on pornography.

I doubt it. Let's review the background.

In 1957, the justices decided that obscene material couldn't be legally suppressed unless it was "utterly without redeeming social values."

This was tantamount to giving everyone in America a license to print French postcards.

After thinking it over for 16 years, the court has now decided that obscenity need only lack "serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value" to justify legal action.

THEORETICALLY, the new definition makes it easier for prosecutors to obtain convictions in pornography cases. But that interpretation overlooks a loophole big enough to show a Linda Lovelace movie through.

Suppose it can be shown that a bawdy book, a skin flick or some other pornographic work may be lacking in serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value but it will help you lose weight?

Is that not an extenuating factor? Does it not constitute a strong argument for leaving the book in circulation?

The reason I am asking these questions is because, coincident with the new Supreme Court obscenity opinion, Bantam Books has published a paperback edition of "How Sex Can Keep You Slim."

In this book, a Dr. Abraham I. Friedman reports that the vast majority of persons who overeat do so because of emotional problems, tensions and anxieties.

THE GOOD DOCTOR further avers that such problems often are caused by sexual hangups and frustrations.

The sexual drive is diverted into appetite. Food becomes a substitute for sex. Ergo, according to Friedman, many persons can lose weight through increased sexual activity.

Now let us consider that the chief rap against pornography is that it appeals to "prurient interests." Which is to say it may be sexually stimulating.

Do you see the problem this poses for the prosecution?

When a skin-flick case comes to trial, one of the defense witnesses turns out to be a chubby individual who testifies that the film helped him get his mind off food.

Chances are half of the jurors are on a diet themselves. Do you think for one minute they are going to bring in a guilty verdict?

Of course not. Where human feelings are concerned, calories are stronger than smut.

Air Force Reservists mark completion of active duty

The steak was tough but so were the stern-faced officers of the Air Force Reserve unit who held an open house Tuesday at their O'Hare Airport headquarters.

The occasion was the completion of two weeks of active duty for members of the 928th Tactical Airlift Group, Air Force Reserve. Officials from several villages attended the luncheon and toured the facilities.

Introduced at the luncheon was the unit's new commanding officer, Lt. Col. Sloan R. Gill, a 20-year military veteran who recently served as commander of the 908th Tactical Air Support Group at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama.

Visitors were told of the most important functions of the reserves, which includes delivering troops, supplies and men with technical knowhow to needy areas in the U.S. or other countries.

The tour included the display of the C-130, a plane which officials said does everything from refueling to carrying NASA missile cones to delivering pigs and cattle to Southeast Asia.

The unit has 250 men, including pilots, maintenance personnel and other military specialists.

Watergate: a challenge of courage

Not all of the scandal's 'good guys' are known to public

by IRA BERKOW
Last in a series

WASHINGTON — There are perhaps heroes in the Watergate scandal who will remain forever mysterious, or moot.

They range from men like James McCord whose motives are questionable, to men in the Federal Bureau of Investigation who may always be anonymous though important, footnotes in history.

FBI men leaked information including that about the close political and unethical ties between the White House and former Acting Director L. Patrick Gray, a relationship which reached its nadir when Gray admitted burning imporant files upon urging of frightened White House aides.

Some FBI men, brought up on the axioms of fidelity, bravery and keeping one's trap shut, were shaken by this butchering of separation of powers. Some, probably in the domestic intelligence division, were also appalled by the illegal bugging and espionage going on under White House auspices. An underground network was formed between these men and some members of the media, including and especially the Washington Post and Jack Anderson.

THESE INFORMANTS did risk their careers and their reputations in getting this information out. Yet their motives are not entirely clear. Perhaps they were torn within themselves and finally responded to a "higher law," one in which they put their principles above the letter of the law. These men did, in fact, break both a federal regulation and a bureau regulation against leaking information.

Perhaps, though, they did not appreciate Gray, who, besides his buckling to White House dictates, also fired or demoted old-time FBI stalwarts, radically began reshaping the FBI image by approving the wearing of colored shirts and long hair and hiring women as field agents.

The motives of James McCord, also an informer in Watergate but a much more visible one than the FBI men, are in question. Did he give lengthy testimony solely in hopes of receiving a lighter sentence for his part in the espionage and burglary of Watergate? Or was he a man of conscience who saw a new light?

Daniel Ellsberg believes the latter. Ellsberg, the Defense Department consultant who gave the Pentagon Papers to The New York Times, is considered an ideological hero by some in this country because of his willingness to go to jail for a larger interest — that is, revealing to the nation through those documents the lies and deceptions of the Kennedy and Johnson administrations relating to the Vietnam War. To President Nixon, however, Ellsberg is hardly a hero, "We have to stop making heroes out of those who steal secrets and publish them in newspapers," he said recently.

"I BELIEVE," said Ellsberg, who attended the early Ervin committee hearings in which McCord testified, "that McCord is an honest man. . .I recognize my own past in him. I, like McCord, spent all my professional life under the belief that the president's word was the law. At a certain point in my life, I discovered that that was a mistake."

McCord's career has been one of federal service: 19 years in the Central Intelligence Agency and four as an FBI agent. He is also a retired Air Force colonel.

He disclosed in a letter to Judge John J. Sirica that political pressure was being exerted on him and the six other Watergate defendants to plead guilty by the administration officials, that administration officials had prior knowledge of bugging, and that they perjured themselves.

He broke the case wide open.

"I felt a sense of injustice about the whole business," said McCord.

A man like G. Gordon Liddy, convicted as the ringleader of the bugging group, is, unlike McCord, remaining mum as he begins to serve a minimum six-year, eight-month prison sentence.

"IN WARTIME," wrote Stewart Alsop, in recent issue of Newsweek, "G. Gordon Liddy would have been festooned with decorations rather than slapped into jail. As so often in wartome, his stubborn silence did no good.

Another who began work in the administration with lofty idealism and then grew disenchanted with internal operations quit in silent protest. He is Hugh W. Sloan Jr.

He resigned abruptly as treasurer of the Committee to Re-elect the President last July, less than a month after the Watergate arrests. According to Sloan, he was approached by Jeb Stuart Magruder and Fred LaRue, two high-ranking campaign officers, and asked to give false testimony before a federal grand jury.

"I didn't want to be a party to it," said Sloan, in a recent interview. "I have a clear conscience personally, I believe I did the right things — but I feel lousy." He reflected on the past five years in the White House: "There was no independent sense of morality there. I mean, if you worked for someone, he was God and whatever the orders were, you did it. It was all so narrow, so closed."

THE UGLY uncoverings of Watergate disturbed others. Barry Goldwater, senator from Arizona and previously a staunch supporter of Nixon's, was the first Republican to appeal to the President to come out in the open on the Watergate matter and clear the air. He doubted the veracity of some of the President's statements. ("I have to think he knew this coverup a good deal before his April 30 speech"). At the time, it was a courageous thing for a partisan senator to say.

There were others after the truth, and others taking risks. Such as the prosecutor in Florida, a Nixon appointee, who went after Donald Segretti. The prosecutor risked his job.

And certain elements of the press, still being maligned by the administration, continued to energetically dig toward the bottom of what sometimes seems a bottomless pit. This of course includes The Washington Post, particularly their young local crime reporters, Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein (known in the city room as either "Woodstein," or "The Katzenjammer Kids").

There was Walter Cronkite who devoted two 15-minute segments to the importance of Watergate during the presidential campaign. A gutsy thing to do because (a) it was not really so powerful an issue back then and (b) Cronkite and the Columbia Broadcasting System predictably incurred the wrath of the administration during the next several months and was branded "shabby" and "irresponsible."

JUDGE SIRICA believes that much of the political scandal of Watergate and other scandals on local levels would diminish if citizens took greater interest in government — asking more questions, being more aware of their candidates, voting for the best people available. "We do too much spectating," he said. He believes in the uncommon man, the man with vision who can determine his own fate. He agrees, it seems, with John F. Kennedy, who wrote in his book, "Profiles in Courage":

"To be courageous. . .requires no exceptional qualifications, no magic formula, no special combination of time, place and circumstance, it is an opportunity that sooner or later is presented to us all. Politics merely furnishes one arena which imposes special tests of courage.

"In whatever arena of life one may meet the challenge of courage, whatever may be the sacrifices he faces if he follows his conscience — the loss of his friends, his fortune, his contentment, even the esteem of his fellow man — each man must decide for himself the course he will follow. . .Each man must look into his own soul."

Wiretap legality still unresolved

by CHARLOTTE MOULTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Far beyond Watergate, government wiretapping in recent years has raised legal questions that the courts have yet to resolve.

Two major issues:

- The Supreme Court has never ruled on the constitutionality of foreign intelligence wiretaps without warrants, although a year ago in a major defeat for the Nixon administration it ruled that in internal security cases a warrant is required.
- The high court now has on its docket several challenges to the methods used by former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell in applying to trial courts for wiretapping warrants in criminal prosecutions. By recent Justice Department count, 124 criminal cases have been held up in lower courts around the country over the issue.

HERE IS the background:

Government wiretapping has been coming up in the Supreme Court since the 1920's. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes once called it "a dirty business." But for decades the court would go only so far as to forbid use of wiretap evidence in criminal trials.

At the time, the court was relying on the Federal Communications Act, which forbade interception and disclosure of telephone conversations. But the law was largely ignored.

Officials were thus free to wiretap to catch criminals, although they had to convict him by evidence untained in any way by the tap. Wiretapping flourished in the hands of not only local police and the FBI but also business competitors, labor spies and private detectives tracking down erring spouses.

In 1965, following congressional hearings on the extent of wiretapping, President Lyndon B. Johnson forbade federal agents to practice it except for national security reasons.

IN 1967, the Supreme Court ruled for the first time that the Fourth Amendment, which guarantees "the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures," applies also to telephone communications and that a court warrant is necessary to wiretap.

Speaking for an 8-to-1 court, Justice Potter Stewart said the need for a warrant issued by a neutral magistrate does not vanish "when the search in question is transferred from the setting of a home, an office or a hotel room to that of a telephone booth."

Congress responded by passing the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968, which among other things sets forth procedures for obtaining these wiretap warrants.

The law forbids wiretapping by individuals. It permits it in cases such as espionage, kidnapping, bribery of a public official and counterfeiting, provided it is authorized by a federal judge on application by the attorney general personally or by a "specially designated" assistant attorney general.

EACH APPLICATION must be in writing, giving a "full and complete statement of the facts and circumstances" relied upon as justification. It must include details as to the particular offense involved, a description of the place to be bugged and the identity of the person to be overheard, if known. The law allows a parallel practice for state law enforcement officers.

Ramsey Clark, President Johnson's attorney general, believed wiretapping to be an inefficient tool and an invasion of privacy which "demeans the individual." He refused to use the powers the law gave him and issued orders banning use of all electronic bugging devices except in national security cases.

Clark initiated a wholesale review of all government criminal cases to determine whether illegal bugging had occurred. Forty admissions of illegal snooping followed and the cases were reexamined in trial courts to see if th defendants were harmed.

Mitchell, President Nixon's attorney general, did believe in wiretapping.

"Any citizen of this United States who is not involved in some illegal activity has nothing to fear whatsoever," he said.

ACCORDING TO the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, there were 33 court-authorized federal wiretaps in 1969, 183 in 1970, 285 in 1971 and 206 in 972. Court-approved state wiretaps grew from 269 in 1969 to 649 in 1972.

In two areas Mitchell claimed the inherent right of government to tap without any warrant. The first was foreign intelligence and the second was protection against radical groups or anyone else thought dangerous to domestic security.

On June 8, 1972, the Supreme Court stepped in to ban wiretapping without a warrant in cases of alleged domestic subversion. Presidents had been authorizing domestic security surveillance in varying degrees for a quarter of a century. The case involved Lawrence Plamondon, a member of the militant White Panther Party, who was accused of conspiring to blow up the Central Intelligence Agency office in Ann Arbor, Mich.

THE 8-TO-0 opinion was written by a Nixon appointee, Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. Warning of the possible abuses of such unrestrained eavesdropping power, he wrote: "History abundantly documents the tendency of government — however benevolent and benign in its motives — to view with suspicion those who most fervently dispute its policies."

Powell repeatedly said the high court reached no judgment on the government's surveillance authority with respect to the activities of foreign powers, That issue is now before the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in the government's espionage conspiracy case against Igor A. Ivanov, a former Soviet trade agency driver in New York. It will undoubtedly reach the high court in due time.

President Nixon said May 23, 1972, that he personally authorized wiretaps on newsmen and government officials between 1969 and 1971 to check on news leaks which he said were endangering his major foreign policy programs.

In an earlier statement, May 14, acting FBI Director William D. Ruckelshaus made clear that no court permission was obtained for these taps.

FORMER SUPREME Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg told a reporter they were clearly illegal under the 1968 law.

In a recent article he said: "The temptation to use 'national security' as a cloack for suppression of dissent — for limiting the news to what the government wants said — is one of the strongest reasons for confining any 'national security' exceptions in the wiretapping area to genuine foreign espionage."

"Privacy of communications," Goldberg said, "is the essence of democracy. If we cannot speak to each other without government eavesdropping, we soon will not be able to speak to each other without government permission."

At the beginning of its term next fall, the justices must wrestle with the question of how carefully Mitchell complied with the 1968 wiretap rules fashioned by Congress.

In one case recently accepted for review, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals called the Justice Department's methods an "elaborate paper charade" with no visible purpose except to deceive Congress and the court. It found that documents which the law required Mitchell or an assistant attorney general to sign were signed by lesser officials instead.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Far beyond Watergate, government wiretapping in recent years has raised legal questions that the courts have yet to resolve.

Two major issues:

- The Supreme Court has never ruled on the constitutionality of foreign intelligence wiretaps without warrants, although a year ago in a major defeat for the Nixon administration it ruled that in internal security cases a warrant is required.
- The high court now has on its docket several challenges to the methods used by former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell in applying to trial courts for wiretapping warrants in criminal prosecutions. By recent Justice Department count, 124 criminal cases have been held up in lower courts around the country over the issue.

HERE IS the background:

Government wiretapping has been coming up in the Supreme Court since the 1920's. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes once called it "a dirty business." But for decades the court would go only so far as to forbid use of wiretap evidence in criminal trials.

At the time, the court was relying on the Federal Communications Act, which forbade interception and disclosure of telephone conversations. But the law was largely ignored.

Officials were thus free to wiretap to catch criminals, although they had to convict him by evidence untained in any way by the tap. Wiretapping flourished in the hands of not only local police and the FBI but also business competitors, labor spies and private detectives tracking down erring spouses.

In 1965, following congressional hearings on the extent of wiretapping, President Lyndon B. Johnson forbade federal agents to practice it except for national security reasons.

IN 1967, the Supreme Court ruled for the first time that the Fourth Amendment, which guarantees "the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures," applies also to telephone communications and that a court warrant is necessary to wiretap.

Speaking for an 8-to-1 court, Justice Potter Stewart said the need for a warrant issued by a neutral magistrate does not vanish "when the search in question is transferred from the setting of a home, an office or a hotel room to that of a telephone booth."

Congress responded by passing the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968, which among other things sets forth procedures for obtaining these wiretap warrants.

The law forbids wiretapping by individuals. It permits it in cases such as espionage, kidnapping, bribery of a public official and counterfeiting, provided it is authorized by a federal judge on application by the attorney general personally or by a "specially designated" assistant attorney general.

EACH APPLICATION must be in writing, giving a "full and complete statement of the facts and circumstances" relied upon as justification. It must include details as to the particular offense involved, a description of the place to be bugged and the identity of the person to be overheard, if known. The law allows a parallel practice for state law enforcement officers.

Ramsey Clark, President Johnson's attorney general, believed wiretapping to be an inefficient tool and an invasion of privacy which "demeans the individual." He refused to use the powers the law gave him and issued orders banning use of all electronic bugging devices except in national security cases.

Clark initiated a wholesale review of all government criminal cases to determine whether illegal bugging had occurred. Forty admissions of illegal snooping followed and the cases were reexamined in trial courts to see if th defendants were harmed.

Mitchell, President Nixon's attorney general, did believe in wiretapping.

"Any citizen of this United States who is not involved in some illegal activity has nothing to fear whatsoever," he said.

ACCORDING TO the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, there were 33 court-authorized federal wiretaps in 1969, 183 in 1970, 285 in 1971 and 206 in 972. Court-approved state wiretaps grew from 269 in 1969 to 649 in 1972.

In two areas Mitchell claimed the inherent right of government to tap without any warrant. The first was foreign intelligence and the second was protection against radical groups or anyone else thought dangerous to domestic security.

On June 8, 1972, the Supreme Court stepped in to ban wiretapping without a warrant in cases of alleged domestic subversion. Presidents had been authorizing domestic security surveillance in varying degrees for a quarter of a century. The case involved Lawrence Plamondon, a member of the militant White Panther Party, who was accused of conspiring to blow up the Central Intelligence Agency office in Ann Arbor, Mich.

THE 8-TO-0 opinion was written by a Nixon appointee, Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. Warning of the possible abuses of such unrestrained eavesdropping power, he wrote: "History abundantly documents the tendency of government — however benevolent and benign in its motives — to view with suspicion those who most fervently dispute its policies."

Powell repeatedly said the high court reached no judgment on the government's surveillance authority with respect to the activities of foreign powers, That issue is now before the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in the government's espionage conspiracy case against Igor A. Ivanov, a former Soviet trade agency driver in New York. It will undoubtedly reach the high court in due time.

President Nixon said May 23, 1972, that he personally authorized wiretaps on newsmen and government officials between 1969 and 1971 to check on news leaks which he said were endangering his major foreign policy programs.

In an earlier statement, May 14, acting FBI Director William D. Ruckelshaus made clear that no court permission was obtained for these taps.

FORMER SUPREME Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg told a reporter they were clearly illegal under the 1968 law.

In a recent article he said: "The temptation to use 'national security' as a cloack for suppression of dissent — for limiting the news to what the government wants said — is one of the strongest reasons for confining any 'national security' exceptions in the wiretapping area to genuine foreign espionage."

"Privacy of communications," Goldberg said, "is the essence of democracy. If we cannot speak to each other without government eavesdropping, we soon will not be able to speak to each other without government permission."

At the beginning of its term next fall, the justices must wrestle with the question of how carefully Mitchell complied with the 1968 wiretap rules fashioned by Congress.

In one case recently accepted for review, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals called the Justice Department's methods an "elaborate paper charade" with no visible purpose except to deceive Congress and the court. It found that documents which the law required Mitchell or an assistant attorney general to sign were signed by lesser officials instead.

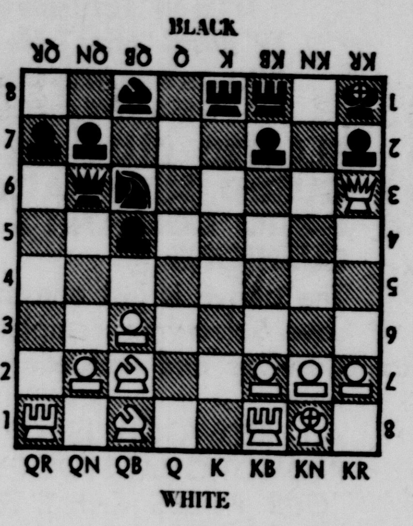
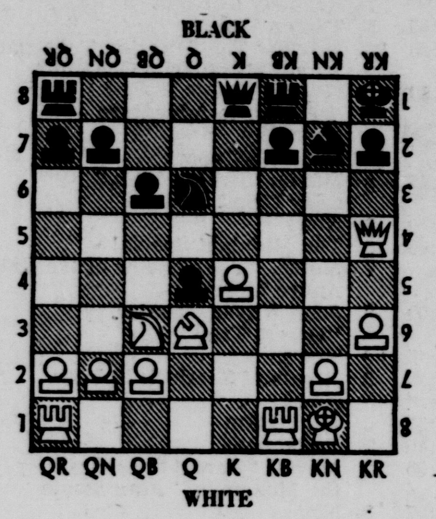
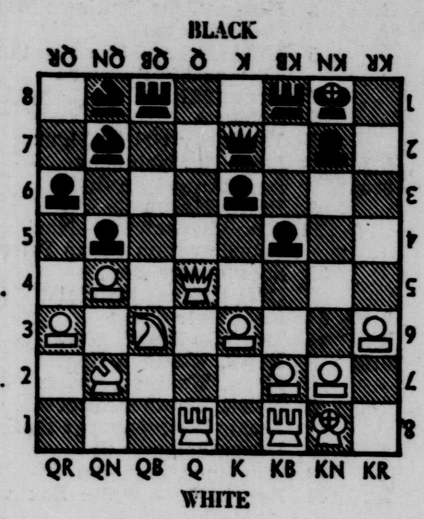
Bobby Fischer foils blockade, defeats cagey Benko



White threatens mate, but black has an easy defense.



Why doesn't P-K5 work? Find white's brilliant move.



In the previous position, white should play R-B6. What is black's move here?

Each new position the player faces over the chessboard presents him with a historical moment in which he is the supreme actor. The particular alloy of imagination, will and intelligence he can alchemize for that moment is the essence of his act.

Moments of brillance appear when the player "sees" a unique application of a familiar idea. Sometimes the idea itself is simple but the particular application of it is unexpectedly profound.

Diagram 1

What could be simpler than white's intention in Diagram 1? He threatens to play QxRP mate. That threat, however, is easily met by P-B4. The bishop pawn plays blocker an white's possibilities are rendered innocuous. The message for other positions is straightforward and clear: "the blocker must be blocked."

Diagram 2

On Monday, Dec. 30, 1963, Bobby Fischer had gained the position in Diagram 2 against Pal Benko in the U.S. Championship. He did not play 19) P-K5, which seemingly has two unstoppable threats, for Benko's cagily intended reply, P-B4 would have been more than adequate. Instead Fischer played 19) R-B6!!, which blocks the potential blocker, the bishop pawn. If . . . BxR, the blockade would be sustained and the mate inevitable after 20) P-K5.

Benko despairinly played. . .K-N1 and Fischer continued with 20) P-K5. After. . .P-KR3 and 21) N-K2, Benko resigned. The black knight that is preventing Q-B5 and mate must submit to capture.

BxR by black would always be followed by QxRP and mate.

Diagram 3

In our next position (Diagram 3), Benko is white but again the loser. What is Lombardy's (black's) inspired winning move?

Again the required move is a "blocker." It is 22). . .B-B6!! Whatever white does, he is lost. If he moves the attacked rook, black would answer with 23). . .Q-N4 and meet white's puny 24) P-KN3 with. . .BxP. If black plays 23) PxB (as he did in the game), black's R-B5, threatening Q-N4 check and R-R5 threatening mate, forces the win. After 23). . .R-B5, Benko played 24) QxR and lost in short order.

In both positions above, the winning player saw how to apply a basic mating idea with penetrating imagination.

The Almanac

Today is Friday, June 29, the 180th day of 1973 with 185 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury and Venus.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Cancer.

William Mayo, founder of the famed medical center bearing his name, was born June 29, 1861.

On this day in history:

In 1852 American statesman Henry Clay died in Washington.

In 1946, the British arrested more than 2,700 Jews in an attempt to put down terrorism in Palestine.

In 1970, the last American troops were withdrawn back into South Vietnam from Cambodia.

In 1972, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that capital punishment as presently administered was unconstitutional; also that sources of information must be revealed to state grand juries.

A thought for the day:

British poet Lord Byron said, "Speak not of men's creeds. They rest between man and his Maker."

How the chessmen move

THE PAWN moves only forward one space, with the exception of its first move when it has the option of moving two spaces forward. It captures one square diagonally forward.

THE KNIGHT moves and captures in the form of a capital L — two spaces in either a horizontal or vertical direction and one space to the right or left. It is the only piece permitted to jump over other men.

THE QUEEN, the most powerful piece on the board, moves and captures diagonally, and horizontally and vertically, along the ranks and files.

THE ROOK (occasionally called the castle) moves and captures horizontally and vertically, along the ranks and files.

THE BISHOP moves and captures diagonally.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Insurance underwriters worry more about the man who never gets really drunk but still manages to imbibe a lot of alcohol every day than they do about the individual who takes good care of himself except for an occasional bender.

Similarly, the explosive bridge player who takes an occasional plunge does better than the man who likes to bid every time it is his turn, whether or not there is a valid reason.

West's two-diamond call is one of those pointless bids. He won't be hurt there but the bid is not going to do him any good and may really hurt him.

This time it did. South went right up with dummy's king of diamonds and led a trump. West took his ace and led a second diamond. East could ruff or not. It didn't matter. If he did ruff he would be ruffing a trick that declarer would have had to lose later.

Now, let's see what would have happened if West had not overcalled. When he led the queen of diamonds South might still have played dummy's king, but he might have let it come around to his ace. Then, when the second diamond was led East would get a chance to trump a winner, not a loser.

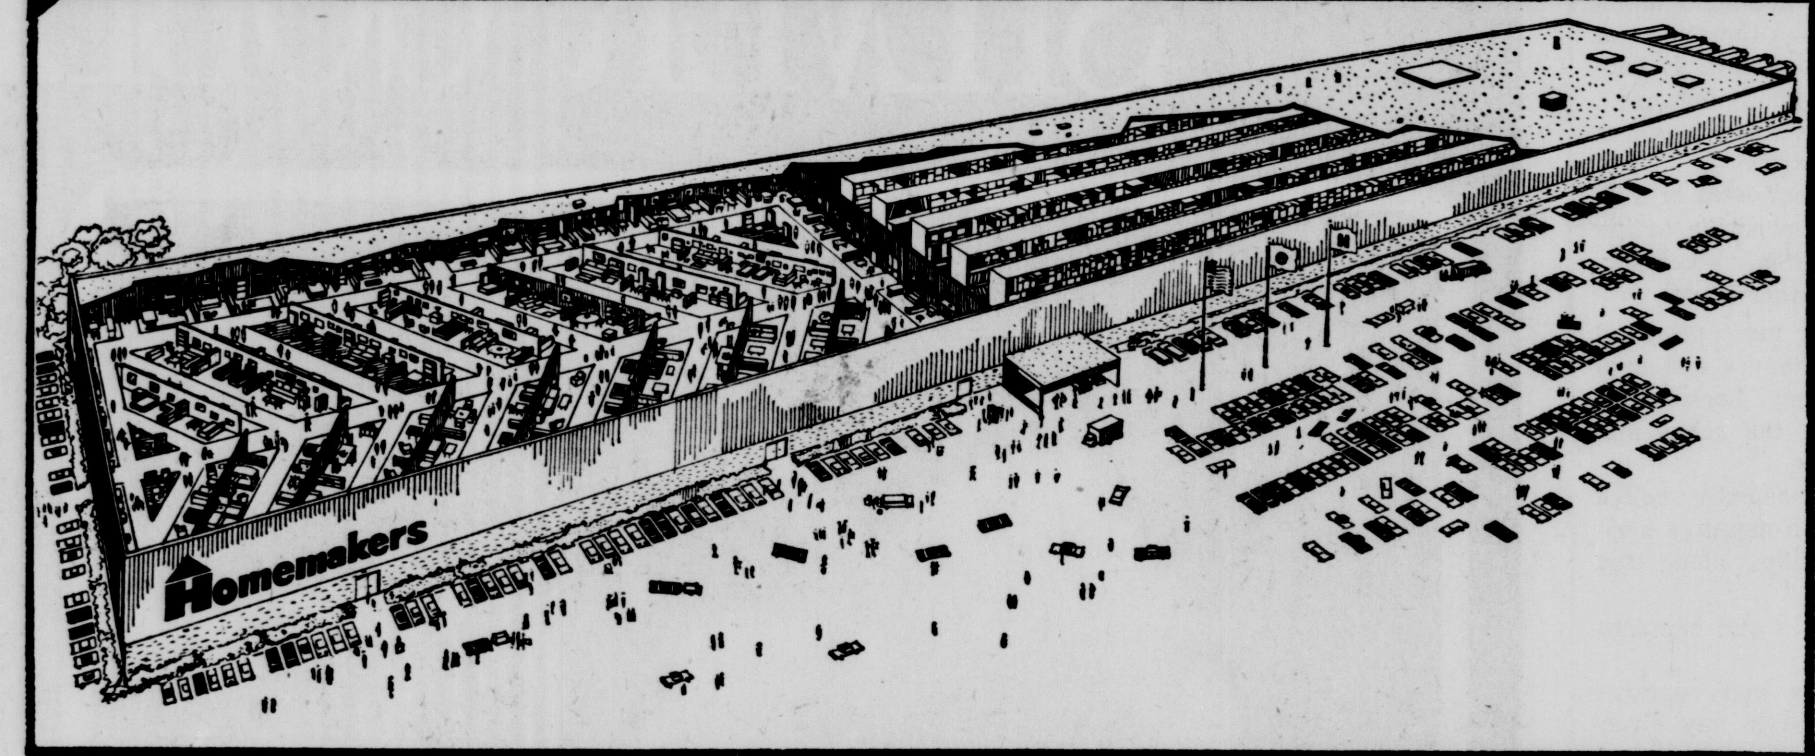
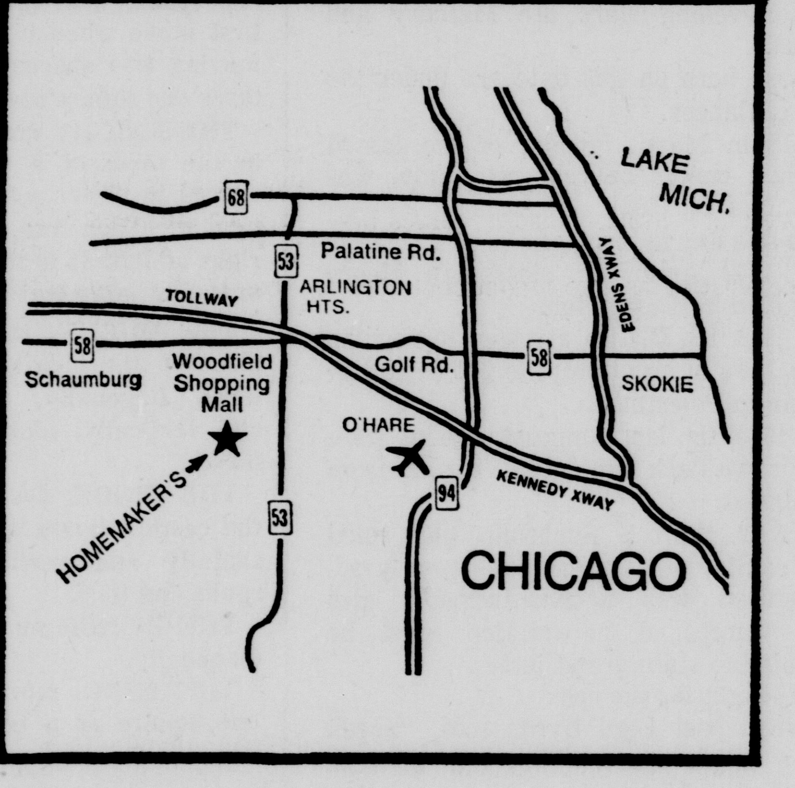
A division of John M. Smyth
Homemakers
Furniture showroom-warehouse opposite Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg





Not low priced furniture.
But good furniture at low prices.

250 model room settings. Famous brand furniture at true warehouse savings. Large selections for immediate delivery.

Homemaker's . . . John M. Smyth's new warehouse showroom, is for people who are as interested in price as they are in quality. You'll see furniture, carpeting and accessories by America's most famous names—displayed in exciting room settings and dramatic vignettes as far as the eye can see. Wide selections from Simmons, Thomasville, Selig, Lane, Howell, La-Z-Boy, Bassett, Berkline, Mersman, Loeblein, Fox, Broyhill, Rowe, Dixie and many other famous makers for immediate delivery. More rooms, more ideas than you would ever expect to find in one place.

This is why prices are astonishingly low. Our lovely showrooms are connected directly to our warehouse, so that unlike conventional stores that include delivery and set up expenses in their price we give you the option choosing home delivery and set up at extra cost. The savings we make on packing, handling, transfer and delivery we pass on to you. This price tag on every item will tell you exactly what these savings amount to. And, if you should have occasion to visit another Warehouse-Showroom, please shop and compare our prices.

Satisfaction guaranteed: If for any reason whatsoever you are not completely satisfied with your purchase, Homemakers gives you a full twenty four hours to return it and receive a full refund. Also, we service what we sell and will be glad to replace or repair any item defective in materials or workmanship.

Prompt delivery. So the furniture you fall in love with today can be in your home tonight. Our expert loaders can work wonders packing it inside or on top of your car, or there are U-Hauls available nearby at special discount. If you prefer delivery, we'll oblige with fast service at low cost.

Convenient payments available. Establishing credit is simple and quickly done at Homemakers. Extra special consideration is given to newly weds and others who are just establishing their credit rating.

Well worth the drive. Homemakers is just opposite Woodfield shopping center. It's less than half an hour from half of Chicagoland and immediately accessible to major tolls and highways. Perhaps that's one reason people come from as far away as Michigan, Indiana and Wisconsin. Perhaps the other reason is that Homemakers is a division of John M. Smyth.

Hours: Monday thru Friday 10 to 10, Saturday 9:30 to 6:30, Sunday 10:30 to 6:30.

STAR TREK fans — all is not lost in space. Familiar voices and faces of the Enterprise crew will be back on the TV screen this fall in an animated cartoon series set for Saturday morning TV. These are the first sketches published from the new show. At left is the new Mr. Spock and the original, Leonard Nimoy; at right the cartoon Capt. James Kirk and William Shatner.

Saturday–a.m. show aimed at adults

Good news, 'Star Trek' fans: it's coming back—as cartoon

by DICK KLEINER

RESEDA, Calif. — Lately, animation has become almost a dirty word, especially with TV critics. They take a cursory look at TV's Saturday-morning schedule and quickly dismiss it all as junk.

The men at Filmation Associates, which churns out a lot of those Saturday morning shows, believe that is unfair. This coming season, they're out to show everybody — critics and audience — that there's quality in Saturday a.m. cartoon shows.

The cartoon version of Star Trek is their challenge vehicle. Filmation's board chairman, Norman Prescott, president, Lou Scheimer, and secretary-treasurer, Hal Sutherland, all believe that Star Trek in animation is a revolutionary step.

"WE'RE NOT aiming at kids," Scheimer says. "Kids from three to six will watch anything that moves. It doesn't have to have quality or even much of a story."

"This is the first attempt to do an adult show in animation," Prescott says. "Never before has an adult audience been challenged to watch a Saturday morning show. We feel it is a bold experiment."

"The problem is that kids have not had a choice on Saturday morning," Sutherland says. "We're going to find out if they'll go for more sophistication."

THIS ISN'T the first show the studio is proud of — they also do "Fat Albert and Cosby Kids," which they consider "the best commercial animated show." Star Trek is, in their estimation, something even better.

They're using almost all of the original Star Trek cast as both voices and models. Prescott says they have "the biggest and most expensive cast of voices ever assembled for animation." Gene Roddenbery, who created the original show, is in charge of the stories.

What you may not know about Saturday morning cartoon shows is the frequency with which they are repeated. Since animated programs are time-consuming and costly to make — it takes four months to make a one half-hour show — they cannot have a full season of 26 episodes.

THEY MAKE 16 — crews working on overlapping schedules — and the network buys them for two years. Thus, each episode is aired six or seve times, It doesn't seem to matter to the kids.

The big problem in the animation business these days is finding animators. Sutherland, an old Disney hand, says that it's tough to keep the industry alive these days.

"The old animators are dying off," he says, "and new ones are hard to train. There are perhaps 1,000 animators left. In our peak season, we need 2,000."

THEY HAVE a training program at the studio, which helps, but of even more help is their new project of making full length animated features. This was designed specifically for the purpose of giving their animators a full year of employment, so they'll be on hand during the TV-drawing season.

They are doing 12 features for Warner Brothers — three a year for four years. All of them will be based on classics, with "Oliver Twist" and "Treasure Island" first up. They are designed to be shown on TV here and exhibited theatrically overseas.

These will not be full animation, at least not as compared to the Disney school of animation, but they will be five times as full as the Saturday morning cartoons.

They have high hopes for them but it's the Saturday morning shows which are their bread and butter. The networks are happy about Saturday morning animated shows, too. Prescott says 10 per cent of the networks' revenue comes during those few hours each Saturday morning.

DuBrow On TV

by Rick DuBrow

HOLLYWOOD — Some well-known show business performers are making television news in unexpected ways these days.

First there is Danny Kaye. On July 9, he'll turn commentator for a baseball game on NBC-TV. This is part of the network's current moves to add spice to its Monday night major league contests.

Before this season's Monday games began, NBC-TV made known that it would have celebrities as guest commentators. The idea propagated was that visiting personalities from show business and other fields would heighten video audience interest.

Actually, the games are handled very capably in all areas by the regular broadcasters, Curt Gowdy and Tony Kubek, whom the guest celebrities join.

And, in fact, Kaye is the first show business entertainer to be a visiting baseball sportscaster under the new plan. He is a long-time fan.

THIS MONDAY another sportscaster, Mel Allen, the voice of the New York Yankees for many years, will be the guest.

Another performer making unexpected television news is Gardner McKay, an actor who burst upon the show business scene some years ago with tremendous publicity as a potential matinee idol. He had, in fact, become well known.

And now it is announced that a play he has written will be broadcast on the non-commercial Video network this coming season.

He also will direct the play, which is entitled "Me," and which, according to a press release, "deals with the effect of a mentally retarded boy on other members of his family."

The play will be a production of the non-commercial network's series of often-notable presentations, "Hollywood Television Theatre."

YET ANOTHER performer in a unique television position these days is Bob Newhart, star of his own situation comedy series on CBS-TV.

The series has been doing well in the ratings all along, but in recent weeks it has skyrocketed. In the 70-market ratings for the week ending June 10, it came in No. 1. And then for the week ending June 17, the 70-market survey placed it in the top spot again.

CBS-TV's "All In The Family," for a lengthy time video's top rated series, dropped to 18th place in the same survey for the period ending June 10, but it bounced back to second position in the seven-day span through June 17.

"All In The Family" had slipped for some weeks in the 70-week ratings until it rebounded in the June 17 rankings.

However, in the major national statistics for the two weeks ending May 27, it was still the No. 1 series, with only the Emmy Awards show and the Miss U.S.A. Pageant finishing ahead of it.

THE 70-MARKET June 17 statistics. by the way, ranked ABC-TV's new summer comedy series "Love Thy Neighbor," about a black couple and white couple whose houses are next to each other, as the No. 4 show.

"Love Thy Neighbor," a weekly half-hour entry, trailed only Newhart, "All In the Family," and the "Mary Tyler Moore" series.

Kickin' It Around

BOB FRISK
Sports Editor

FOR THE PAST TWO Mondays, slow nights in this particular sportswriting business, I tried to watch the Chicago White Sox games on television.

I didn't have any luck, and it was not because Channel 44, however fuzzy it comes in at times, was having one of its fuzziest nights.

Channel 44 wasn't fuzzy at all this Monday, and "Cry of the City" with Victor Mature and Richard Conte came in loud and clear. Unfortunately, Victor Mature doesn't swing a bat as well as Dick Allen.

It's been brought up before, but it should be brought up again now. Baseball deserves a swift kick for continuing stupidity over its national television contract. It seems an especially opportune time for delivery.

The White Sox were blacked out in Chicago because of the Monday night telecasts by NBC.

For the recent Monday night telecast by NBC of the game between the California Angels and White Sox, an entire nation of fans was piped in except those who cared the most. Chicago fans ended up watching Kansas City and Oakland on Channel 5. Channel 44 showed a movie.

This week the White Sox played Minnesota, but once again, because of the national telecast on NBC between Boston and Detroit, Channel 44 showed a movie.

The rule that prohibits fans in the major league cities from ever watching their own club on national television is not designed to protect the home gate so much as to apparently protect the local media contract.

And this reaches ludicrous levels of logic on occasion, such as the Angels-White Sox telecast when it merely protected the radio coverage of the game in Chicago. I'm a great fan of Harry Caray, but for a couple TV games a year, the White Sox faithful surely would find him expendable. For that matter, they could tune him in anyway on radio and turn down the television sound.

For the Monday night NBC telecasts there is no competing television, only radio, for local telecasts are prohibited, a step that must have been taken to help boost NBC's ratings. Yet they remain locked in against fans seeing their own club on national television.

Baseball's local TV-radio contracts, unlike pro football, appear more valuable in the aggregate than the national television contract. But the NBC deal, obtained so painlessly, is an absolute necessity for the teams because their operating budgets have been adjusted in anticipation of this revenue.

The blackout rule makes some sense on Saturday telecasts because very often the team is televising locally and to go head-to-head is poor strategy. But to continue it on Monday nights when the owners have already consented not to televise locally, so the only media being protected is the less valuable radio package, is stupidity.

I've always felt there were intangible but absolute benefits that would accrue to the owners as the fans watch their favorite club under the special glare provided by NBC's cameras and commentary. It would enhance the stature of the team.

IT HIT ME TUESDAY while editing Little League baseball forms that a guy should take stock now and then and examine what he is doing with his life.

I mean, what am I accomplishing? What am I contributing? In the overall picture of life, so what if Johnny Jones hits a grand slam homer in the North Red, White and Blue Intermediate Minor (or was it Major?) Juniors ? What does it really mean?

It's good to evaluate your position at least once a year, and what better time than before a vacation?

Sports remains one of the great balance wheels in our society. It is one of the reasons why we have such a great society.

This is a demanding world. Sports is a way of keeping things in balance — an outlet from the pressures of everyday living.

Irritants prevail and will always prevail in sports, but you can see in the future a certain splendor. In the coming years, as leisure time expands, our use of all this free time is going to be terribly important to our well-being.

Sports will surely be a major contributor to that well-being. They will keep us going in an increasingly uncertain and dangerous world. They can help make life more bearable for all of us.

In this context, sports are good, and that's why a person is contributing in this sportswriting business.

You have to think of the people who read your stories or look at your pages every day. You have to think of the enjoyment they might get from them. It might only be a passing thing, but for a moment, for an instant, maybe you've lightened their load.

Everybody has some doubts at some time about what they are doing with their lives. Sportswriters are no different. We just have to come to an understanding that our work can bring some light, however slight, into the lives of others.

I feel better now. I'm ready for a vacation. End of thoughts. End of column until Friday, Aug. 3. The beaches beckon.

KING FOR A DAY. By proclamation of Mayor Richard J. Daley, Saturday will be Secretariat Day in Chicago. Superhorse, shown upon arrival yesterday at O'Hare International Airport, his trainer looks on while Lucien Laurin handles a barrage of questions from the news media. Secretariat headlines Saturday's Arlington Invitational.

All-Stars??

Is ballot the best way to pick teams?

by MIKE KLEIN

Beneath Ron Blomberg's flowing blond hair and rippled muscles, there lurks an average Jewish boy from Atlanta, Ga., who once batted .989 in a Little League season.

This same Ron Blomberg has tortured American League pitchers at a near .400 pace through June and decided that someday he, too, would like a monument in Yankee Stadium.

Ron Blomberg, incidentally, is not listed opposite "1st base" on baseball's All-Star ballot, despite a three-year .292 lifetime average.

Chris Chambliss has batted .284 during two Cleveland Indian seasons. But latest statistics show him backfiring at .171.

Until Monday when he knocked home two runs in New York, Chambliss hadn't recorded an RBI since May 25.

Chris Chambliss, incidentally, is listed opposite "1st base" on baseball's All-Star ballot.

But so are Chicago's Dick Allen and Kansas City's John Mayberry. They are why neither Blomberg nor Chambliss will win in fans' All-Star voting.

Blomberg can look to Oakland manager Dick Williams and his selected coaches, including Chicago's Chuck Tanner and Texas' Whitey Herzog, for a spot on the AL roster.

Chambliss?? He should plan three days trying to repair his bat.

The cases of Bronx Bomber Blomberg and no-hit Chambliss help prove the present All-Star ballot is a joke.

It discriminates against rookies and players from low attendance cities, provides an apparent built-in edge to New Yorkers and Chicagoans and gives designated hitters three vacation days.

Any balloting, whether conducted among fans, managers or players, will yield problems and frowns. But some situations are ridiculous.

National Leaguers Henry Aaron and Willie Stargell are battling for first base rights in the July 24 game at Kansas City's Truman Sports Complex.

The discrepancy is that Aaron rarely visits first base except after batting. He's been playing left field.

Assaulting Babe Ruth's 714, Aaron has received more national publicity than Stargell can hope to surmount. So the NL's best first baseman, a man with 22 homers, will watch from the bench.

It is no surprise that Allen led Mayberry by nearly 50,000 votes when last week's American League totals were released.

Mayberry leads Allen in homers (19-16) and runs-batted-in (72-41), the only stats fans really watch. But Allen has cleaned up votes in Sox Park and Wrigley Field.

Similarly, New Yorkers at both stadiums have made Blomberg and Yankee shortstop Gene Michael the AL's only ranking write-ins. Both are sixth at their positions.

Mess-ups are endless, probably because baseball mediamen have little power over the ballot they're asked to approve.

The Game should sigh relief that Boston designated hitter Orlando Cepeda hasn't cracked 25 or 30 homers over the short porch in Fenway Park.

Here's a 35-year old slugger with centurion knees who can barely walk, much less run. The bat still explodes, but where could Cepeda play, homers or no homers?

Guys like Willie Horton, .348 as Detroit's desi, can't feel much better. And much of Blomberg's .400 has been as a designated hitter.

Consider rookies. There are none listed on the 128-man All-Star ballot. Therefore, no rookies are worthy of first team All-Star status . . . ???

Charlie Spikes, Cleveland's rookie outfielder with 15 homers into mostly empty seats, can only hope Oakland's Williams makes him a second liner.

More remarkable than these foulups, however, is that fans got the vote back in 1970 after a 13-year layoff. That's akin to letting peons run the castle. Or, would you hire a meat shop butcher for a hospital shop appendectomy?

The logic to fan voting, from a public relations standpoint, comes from White Sox personnel director Roland Hemond.

"Players and managers might be the best selectors; there's no question about that," Hemond said. "They realize the comparative values of an opponent and his contributions better than the fans.

"But our game — any game — needs fan interest. I don't know how they select it, but the (football) Pro Bowl is diminishing in popularity," said Hemond.

However, the Pro Bowl battles stiffer odds than baseball's All-Star game. For one, it plays second fiddle to the annual Super Bowl.

And the competition, much of it televised, includes pro hockey and basketball, college basketball and a flurry of special events such as American Sportsman.

So baseball should not shed tears. Why sell the All-Star game to unthinking fans who a) Opt for old-timers over new blood, or b) Select their favorite team, en masse?

As released last week, American League starters would average 29.6 years old and 9.5 major league seasons. Extremes are Boston catcher Carlton Fisk (25 years, two seasons) and Baltimore third baseman Brooks Robinson (36 years, 19 seasons).

A ballot rescued from the cement outside White Sox Park showed some mindless adolescent or adult had selected every Chicago Cub except Jim Hickman, a .176 hitter. It must have been hard, taking Aaron over Hickman.

Fans lost balloting rights after Cincinnati stuffed the National League team with Redlegs in 1957. Could it happen again? Why not?

Perhaps, the All-Star game isn't for young players, guys like Spikes, Pat Kelly of the ChiSox and Joe Ferguson of Los Angeles' Dodgers.

Could it be that the All-Star game cares only about Old Tired Faces, year after year? Say it ain't so, Bowie!

3 area products on Illinois Junior World team

Wrestling workouts in Alabama

Three Herald area wrestlers who cut successful paths during their prep careers have earned berths on Illinois' junior world wrestling team.

The trio are Brad Smith, Tad DeLuca and Bruce Beam. Together, they've authored two state championships, one second and one third. All three currently wrestle at NCAA major universities.

With 24 Illinois teammates, they'll begin on Sunday a long string of workouts and eliminations geared at reaching Greco-Roman and freestyle international finals late next month in Miami, Fla.

The schedule starts with one week of intensive training, July 1-7, at the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa. That ends with two sessions of national eliminations.

Qualifiers for the national junior Greco-Roman team will be chosen on Monday and Tuesday, July 9 and 10, in Tuscaloosa. Freestyle finals are July 12-14.

Survivors of the rigorous program will remain in Tuscaloosa for additional training through July 27.

From there, it's down to Miami, Fla., where Greco-Roman finals will be held, July 30-Aug. 1, and freestyle, Aug. 2-4.

The final summer event will be National AAU Junior Olympics for boys 15-to-18 years old on Aug. 8-11 in St. Cloud, Minn.

Smith's prep awards included 1972 Herald Athlete-of-the-Year after he starred in football, wrestling and baseball for Hersey. But the winter sport was his landmark.

The former Husky won back-to-back state titles under coach Tom Porter and was undefeated (31-0) his senior year. Iowa State, where Smith will be a sophomore in September, gave him a full athletic scholarship.

The Martin Luther King Boys Club named him wrestler-of-the-year when Smith was a senior. He was a prep All-American and featured in Sports Illustrated's "Faces-in-the-Crowd."

Chest injuries limited DeLuca to occasional junior-varsity appearances last winter for the University of Michigan.

He and Smith were teammates at Hersey when the Huskies won state titles in 1971 and '72. DeLuca placed second in the 1972 IHSA meet, losing to Bob Holland, two-time state champ from East Leyden.

DeLuca has a full athletic scholarship at Michigan and has wrestled in Mayor Daley Youth Foundation programs since high school days.

Beam, eldest of the area qualifiers, will be a junior at Illinois-Champaign this year. His new head coach will be Porter who made the move from Hersey this spring.

While at Maine West, Beam earned All-Central Suburban honors twice and placed third in state in 1970, his junior year. He did not place as a senior.

He receives partial aid at Illinois and logged four wins against nine losses last winter at 142 pounds.

One other ex-Mid-Suburban League athlete, Frank Savegnago of Glenbard North, has qualified for the training in Tuscaloosa. He'll compete at 198 pounds.

Illinois entrants will be managed by Elias George, head wrestling coach at Evanston High School. Qualifiers are as follows:

105 POUNDS—Dan Cliffe, DeKalb; Walter Dye, Bensenville; Son Nguyen, Evanston.

114—Jeff Schelinski, Gurnee; Bob Borgia, South Holland; Kevin Walsh, Niles.

125—Tim Cysewski, Glenview; Phil Miller, Addison; Jeff Melvin, Evergreen Park.

136—Brad Smith, Arlington Heights; Bruce Beam, Des Plaines; Red Raymond, Danville.

149—Joe Armour, Glenview; Rick Johnson, Glenview; Brad Sears, Evanston.

163—Tad DeLuca, Arlington Heights; Marty Schwartz, Skokie; John King, DeKalb.

180—Ed Vatch, Addison; David Schwartz, Skokie; Gary Siebert, Bensenville.

198—Bruce Pottinger, Yorkville; Alan Marzano, Park Ridge; Frank Savegnago, Carol Stream.

Kickin' It Around

BOB FRISK
Sports Editor

FOR THE PAST TWO Mondays, slow nights in this particular sportswriting business, I tried to watch the Chicago White Sox games on television.

I didn't have any luck, and it was not because Channel 44, however fuzzy it comes in at times, was having one of its fuzziest nights.

Channel 44 wasn't fuzzy at all this Monday, and "Cry of the City" with Victor Mature and Richard Conte came in loud and clear. Unfortunately, Victor Mature doesn't swing a bat as well as Dick Allen.

It's been brought up before, but it should be brought up again now. Baseball deserves a swift kick for continuing stupidity over its national television contract. It seems an especially opportune time for delivery.

The White Sox were blacked out in Chicago because of the Monday night telecasts by NBC.

For the recent Monday night telecast by NBC of the game between the California Angels and White Sox, an entire nation of fans was piped in except those who cared the most. Chicago fans ended up watching Kansas City and Oakland on Channel 5. Channel 44 showed a movie.

This week the White Sox played Minnesota, but once again, because of the national telecast on NBC between Boston and Detroit, Channel 44 showed a movie.

The rule that prohibits fans in the major league cities from ever watching their own club on national television is not designed to protect the home gate so much as to apparently protect the local media contract.

And this reaches ludicrous levels of logic on occasion, such as the Angels-White Sox telecast when it merely protected the radio coverage of the game in Chicago. I'm a great fan of Harry Caray, but for a couple TV games a year, the White Sox faithful surely would find him expendable. For that matter, they could tune him in anyway on radio and turn down the television sound.

For the Monday night NBC telecasts there is no competing television, only radio, for local telecasts are prohibited, a step that must have been taken to help boost NBC's ratings. Yet they remain locked in against fans seeing their own club on national television.

Baseball's local TV-radio contracts, unlike pro football, appear more valuable in the aggregate than the national television contract. But the NBC deal, obtained so painlessly, is an absolute necessity for the teams because their operating budgets have been adjusted in anticipation of this revenue.

The blackout rule makes some sense on Saturday telecasts because very often the team is televising locally and to go head-to-head is poor strategy. But to continue it on Monday nights when the owners have already consented not to televise locally, so the only media being protected is the less valuable radio package, is stupidity.

I've always felt there were intangible but absolute benefits that would accrue to the owners as the fans watch their favorite club under the special glare provided by NBC's cameras and commentary. It would enhance the stature of the team.

IT HIT ME TUESDAY while editing Little League baseball forms that a guy should take stock now and then and examine what he is doing with his life.

I mean, what am I accomplishing? What am I contributing? In the overall picture of life, so what if Johnny Jones hits a grand slam homer in the North Red, White and Blue Intermediate Minor (or was it Major?) Juniors ? What does it really mean?

It's good to evaluate your position at least once a year, and what better time than before a vacation?

Sports remains one of the great balance wheels in our society. It is one of the reasons why we have such a great society.

This is a demanding world. Sports is a way of keeping things in balance — an outlet from the pressures of everyday living.

Irritants prevail and will always prevail in sports, but you can see in the future a certain splendor. In the coming years, as leisure time expands, our use of all this free time is going to be terribly important to our well-being.

Sports will surely be a major contributor to that well-being. They will keep us going in an increasingly uncertain and dangerous world. They can help make life more bearable for all of us.

In this context, sports are good, and that's why a person is contributing in this sportswriting business.

You have to think of the people who read your stories or look at your pages every day. You have to think of the enjoyment they might get from them. It might only be a passing thing, but for a moment, for an instant, maybe you've lightened their load.

Everybody has some doubts at some time about what they are doing with their lives. Sportswriters are no different. We just have to come to an understanding that our work can bring some light, however slight, into the lives of others.

I feel better now. I'm ready for a vacation. End of thoughts. End of column until Friday, Aug. 3. The beaches beckon.

All-Stars??

Is ballot the best way to pick teams?

by MIKE KLEIN

Beneath Ron Blomberg's flowing blond hair and rippled muscles, there lurks an average Jewish boy from Atlanta, Ga., who once batted .989 in a Little League season.

This same Ron Blomberg has tortured American League pitchers at a near .400 pace through June and decided that someday he, too, would like a monument in Yankee Stadium.

Ron Blomberg, incidentally, is not listed opposite "1st base" on baseball's All-Star ballot, despite a three-year .292 lifetime average.

Chris Chambliss has batted .284 during two Cleveland Indian seasons. But latest statistics show him backfiring at .171.

Until Monday when he knocked home two runs in New York, Chambliss hadn't recorded an RBI since May 25.

Chris Chambliss, incidentally, is listed opposite "1st base" on baseball's All-Star ballot.

But so are Chicago's Dick Allen and Kansas City's John Mayberry. They are why neither Blomberg nor Chambliss will win in fans' All-Star voting.

Blomberg can look to Oakland manager Dick Williams and his selected coaches, including Chicago's Chuck Tanner and Texas' Whitey Herzog, for a spot on the AL roster.

Chambliss?? He should plan three days trying to repair his bat.

The cases of Bronx Bomber Blomberg and no-hit Chambliss help prove the present All-Star ballot is a joke.

It discriminates against rookies and players from low attendance cities, provides an apparent built-in edge to New Yorkers and Chicagoans and gives designated hitters three vacation days.

Any balloting, whether conducted among fans, managers or players, will yield problems and frowns. But some situations are ridiculous.

National Leaguers Henry Aaron and Willie Stargell are battling for first base rights in the July 24 game at Kansas City's Truman Sports Complex.

The discrepancy is that Aaron rarely visits first base except after batting. He's been playing left field.

Assaulting Babe Ruth's 714, Aaron has received more national publicity than Stargell can hope to surmount. So the NL's best first baseman, a man with 22 homers, will watch from the bench.

It is no surprise that Allen led Mayberry by nearly 50,000 votes when last week's American League totals were released.

Mayberry leads Allen in homers (19-16) and runs-batted-in (72-41), the only stats fans really watch. But Allen has cleaned up votes in Sox Park and Wrigley Field.

Similarly, New Yorkers at both stadiums have made Blomberg and Yankee shortstop Gene Michael the AL's only ranking write-ins. Both are sixth at their positions.

Mess-ups are endless, probably because baseball mediamen have little power over the ballot they're asked to approve.

The Game should sigh relief that Boston designated hitter Orlando Cepeda hasn't cracked 25 or 30 homers over the short porch in Fenway Park.

Here's a 35-year old slugger with centurion knees who can barely walk, much less run. The bat still explodes, but where could Cepeda play, homers or no homers?

Guys like Willie Horton, .348 as Detroit's desi, can't feel much better. And much of Blomberg's .400 has been as a designated hitter.

Consider rookies. There are none listed on the 128-man All-Star ballot. Therefore, no rookies are worthy of first team All-Star status . . . ???

Charlie Spikes, Cleveland's rookie outfielder with 15 homers into mostly empty seats, can only hope Oakland's Williams makes him a second liner.

More remarkable than these foulups, however, is that fans got the vote back in 1970 after a 13-year layoff. That's akin to letting peons run the castle. Or, would you hire a meat shop butcher for a hospital shop appendectomy?

The logic to fan voting, from a public relations standpoint, comes from White Sox personnel director Roland Hemond.

"Players and managers might be the best selectors; there's no question about that," Hemond said. "They realize the comparative values of an opponent and his contributions better than the fans.

"But our game — any game — needs fan interest. I don't know how they select it, but the (football) Pro Bowl is diminishing in popularity," said Hemond.

However, the Pro Bowl battles stiffer odds than baseball's All-Star game. For one, it plays second fiddle to the annual Super Bowl.

And the competition, much of it televised, includes pro hockey and basketball, college basketball and a flurry of special events such as American Sportsman.

So baseball should not shed tears. Why sell the All-Star game to unthinking fans who a) Opt for old-timers over new blood, or b) Select their favorite team, en masse?

THE BEST IN / Sports

As released last week, American League starters would average 29.6 years old and 9.5 major league seasons. Extremes are Boston catcher Carlton Fisk (25 years, two seasons) and Baltimore third baseman Brooks Robinson (36 years, 19 seasons).

A ballot rescued from the cement outside White Sox Park showed some mindless adolescent or adult had selected every Chicago Cub except Jim Hickman, a .176 hitter. It must have been hard, taking Aaron over Hickman.

Fans lost balloting rights after Cincinnati stuffed the National League team with Redlegs in 1957. Could it happen again? Why not?

Perhaps, the All-Star game isn't for young players, guys like Spikes, Pat Kelly of the ChiSox and Joe Ferguson of Los Angeles' Dodgers.

Could it be that the All-Star game cares only about Old Tired Faces, year after year? Say it ain't so, Bowie!

"Number one, what's wrong with the game is that ballplayers don't want to play anyhow," Caray said. (But they never mail back the pension checks.)

"The veterans that are voted in can use the rest. And if you select a bunch of unknowns, the fans will bitch because you didn't select favorites," he said.

"If you allow the managers to select the team, they'll take their own favorites. I don't know how to do it.

Fan's Forum

REACTIONS TO COLUMN

Mr. Larry Everhart:

Reading your "first in a two-part series" is one of the classics ever written. This must go into history with the Keystone Kops, Laurel and Hardy, and Abbott and Costello. It is really side-splitting slapstick. My hope is that you wrote this to mean just as I have indicated. It would be tragic to think you really were as far away from baseball your writing shows.

Baseball Digest dated July, 1973 is the source I have used to point out a total of 62, yes, sixty-two former National League players who, for one or more reasons are collecting paychecks in the "junior circuit" at the present time. If you look closely, and your arithmetic is good, it is plain to see that most of these former "ball players" are over age 30.

These instances are now, but this has been going on for years. When an American League team needs strength they try to get someone from the "senior circuit" who has just about outlived his usefulness as a Major League player.

The great New York Yankees pulled John Mize, Johnny Hopp and others when they were in need of help. The pennant winners in that league in 1959 employed two old National League has-beens to make their bullpen, Gerry Staley and Turk Lown. Then they sent an SOS for Ted Kluszewski because they needed extra strength. More National League help was apparently needed because the Los Angeles Dodgers and Duke Snider, who played with a very bad back, wiped the American League up in six games.

1954 was another banner year for that junior circuit. They sent a team to the World Series which had won more games in a season than any team in their history only to be shut out four games to none by a New York Giant team that made it without Lemon, Garcia and Wynn.

My best wishes to you and feel free to contact me if you ever decide to learn something about baseball.

Jack Burke
Hoffman Estates

Dear Herald (Larry Everhart):

I have enjoyed your two articles comparing the National and American leagues. Statistics can be twisted any way to make a point, but I do agree with your observation that the American League has caught the National League. I don't agree that one is vastly superior over another — or even superior. All these players are professionals and with expansion the leagues have reached parity. It's a debate that will go on and on and actually prove very little. But just the fact that people are debating is healthy for the sport of baseball.

Harold Rohnstedt
Arlington Heights

Dear Larry Everhart:

The articles comparing the National and American leagues were interesting if for no other reason than somebody finally gave the American League some credit. I agree that the American League was short of star talent a few years ago but they've made tremendous strides. And I'm tired of hearing the cases of Kenny Holtzman and Bill North thrown up as cases of how weak the American League is. Holtzman did throw TWO no-hitters in the so-called powerful National League and the Cubs never gave North a chance. Let North play, let him run, and you have an exciting player. It was another example of the Cubs' penchant for dealing away their good prospects.

Ed Hanlon
Des Plaines

Dear Herald:

If pitching is 70 or 80 or 90 per cent of the game of baseball, then I have to agree that the American League is stronger, as Larry Everhart pointed out in his recent column. It didn't use to be the case, but the American League teams, for the most part, have better depth of starting pitchers.

The White Sox in a period of two weeks have faced Gaylord Perry, Rudy May, Bill Singer, Nolan Ryan, Jim Hunter, Vida Blue, Ken Holtzman, Blue Moon Odom and Bert Blyleven.

You don't run into those stretches of top pitchers in the National League. Sure, there are the Tom Seavers and Bob Gibsons and Steve Carltons, but you don't face the steady diet of strong pitching in the NL.

The National League has made some stupid trades in recent years, trading away the pitching that has helped strengthen the American.

William Woodward
Arlington Heights

Dear Herald:

It's absurd to compare the baseball leagues. Nobody, and I mean nobody, can say the American League is stronger than the National. All you have to do is look at the rosters. What I really think is funny is that a writer who is obviously a White Sox fan rapping the National League. He cuts down a Cubs' fan and writer who raps the American League and then turns right around and pulls the same idea.

Dottie Fisher and Diane Spanier tied for low gross honors at 50 to pace the first flight in last Friday's edition of the Arlington Heights Newcomers Golf League.

Fisher and Vonnie Sutter registered birdies. Bea Dunn And Jeanne Fleming matched each other to win the day's event — low putts — with 15 each. Fleming had three pars, as did June Terry. Eloise Harrison had two and Dunn,, Connie Malecki, Jean Derrick, and Sig Dion and all carded one par.

In Flight No. 2, Dee Smith and Fran Valli were double winners with low gross scores of 59. Mary Jane Bloom and Betty Pickard each needed 15 putts to tie for that lead. Valli collected two pars and Marilyn Bies, Barb Hirsch and Eileen Moynahan each carded single pars.

Pat Abbott dominated Flight No. 3, winning low gross, at 57 and low putts with 17. She also parred the 16th hole, as did Wanda Berry. Berry and Helen Snow had pars at No. 12.

Evelyn Anderholm's 68 ruled Flight No. 4. Betty Allenfort and Lollie Woods were deadlocked for the low putts lead at 18.

Park Ridge halts Wheeling streak

by PAUL LOGAN

Perfection finally ended for Wheeling's American Legion baseball team.

Playing at Park Ridge Wednesday in a Ninth District game, the young men of Coach Bob Grybash saw some tough calls go against them, some lucky hits fall in and a 9-0 record go down the drain in one inning.

Holding a 1-0 lead heading into the bottom of the fifth, Harper College ace George Pattee gave up three base hits, only one getting out of the infield to load the bases. A fly to center was caught, but the call at the plate was in favor of the hosts.

"That play beat us," said Grybash, who was not too trilled with the umpiring. "A triple and a single followed and that was that."

The 4-1 setback was the first in league play for Wheeling.

Wheeling Post 1968 took the lead in the fifth when Pattee singled in Pat McGinn. The latter had singled and went to second on the catcher's throwing error.

Pattee went the distance although he wasn't supposed to start the game. He fanned four and walked two. Known for his fine control, he was off this time and was behind a lot of the hitters.

SCORE BY INNINGS

Win No. 9 came hours earlier with a 9-1 laugher against visiting Elgin. Bob Peter went the first four innings, allowing three hits and no runs. Gordie Nelson finished up, giving up three more hits and one run.

Wheeling scored all the runs needed for victory in the first on a sacrifice fly run batted in by Keith Steelman and an error.

John Slack helped pad the margin with a two-run homer in the third, making it 4-0.

Peter helped his own cause in the fourth with a triple, scoring shortly after on a sacrifice fly by Sal Fioretti.

Mark Pettit hiked margin to 6-1 in the fifth with an RBI single.

The sixth saw three more Post 1968ers treading the plate. Steve Arnier doubled and scored on Peter's single. John Theriault doubled in one and Slack singled in the other.

Slack and Theriault were 3-for-4 with Peter finishing the day with a pitching win and a 2-for-2 plate showing.

Mount Prospect, Haaning triumph

by JIM COOK

The Mount Prospect American Legion team's pitching corps continued firing bullets against the opposition's blanks Wednesday while running its league record to 2-1 with a 4-0 shutout of Logan Square.

Overall, coach Merv Fink's Prospectors have won three straight — all by shutouts — and now boast a consecutive scoreless streak that spans 21 innings?

Rick Haaning, who carded the first seven string of zeroes against Mundelein Sunday, was back at the controls Wednesday, stopping Logan Square on just three hits, walking nobody and fanning six.

Haaning's adversary, Lion Steve Bobowski pitched well enough to win Logan Square's first Ninth District contest, but the fourth inning, when Mount Prospect sent nine men to the plate, proved the difference.

The Prospectors drew first blood in the third when Jim Anderson walked, stole second and scampered home on Bob Chen's one-base shot to center.

The winners blew the game open in the fourth when the inning, appropriately enough, was started by Haaning's bad-hop single near first base.

Gregg Fink followed with a one-out walk before Randy Sherpin loaded the bases with an infield hit that found Lion Shortstop Jim Bucaro flagging down the grounder and saving a run.

Keith Semar drew the second pass of the inning to force Haaning home and Ken Butzen contributed a run batted in with a sacrifice fly to center for the second out. Mount Prospect, though, benefitted from two more Bobowski walks for its third run of the frame.

Bobowski was touched for only five hits all night, but 10 walks finally spelled the difference. Mount Prospect stranded a whopping 10 runners over six innings before darkness intervened and cut the contest one inning short.

The loss was Logan Square's fifth straight in Ninth District competition and dropped them to 10-13 overall. Mount Prospect boosted its league slate to 2-1 and 7-3 overall.

REACTIONS TO COLUMN

Mr. Larry Everhart:

Reading your "first in a two-part series" is one of the classics ever written. This must go into history with the Keystone Kops, Laurel and Hardy, and Abbott and Costello. It is really side-splitting slapstick. My hope is that you wrote this to mean just as I have indicated. It would be tragic to think you really were as far away from baseball your writing shows.

Baseball Digest dated July, 1973 is the source I have used to point out a total of 62, yes, sixty-two former National League players who, for one or more reasons are collecting paychecks in the "junior circuit" at the present time. If you look closely, and your arithmetic is good, it is plain to see that most of these former "ball players" are over age 30.

These instances are now, but this has been going on for years. When an American League team needs strength they try to get someone from the "senior circuit" who has just about outlived his usefulness as a Major League player.

The great New York Yankees pulled John Mize, Johnny Hopp and others when they were in need of help. The pennant winners in that league in 1959 employed two old National League hasbeens to make their bullpen, Gerry Staley and Turk Lown. Then they sent an SOS for Ted Kluszewski because they needed extra strength. More National League help was apparently needed because the Los Angeles Dodgers and Duke Snider, who played with a very bad back, wiped the American League up in six games.

1954 was another banner year for that junior circuit. They sent a team to the World Series which had won more games in a season than any team in their history only to be shut out four games to none by a New York Giant team that made it without Lemon, Garcia and Wynn.

My best wishes to you and feel free to contact me if you ever decide to learn something about baseball.

Jack Burke
Hoffman Estates

Dear Herald (Larry Everhart):

I have enjoyed your two articles comparing the National and American leagues. Statistics can be twisted any way to make a point, but I do agree with your observation that the American League has caught the National League. I don't agree that one is vastly superior over another — or even superior. All these players are professionals and with expansion the leagues have reached parity. It's a debate that will go on and on and actually prove very little. But just the fact that people are debating is healthy for the sport of baseball.

Harold Rohnstedt
Arlington Heights

Dear Larry Everhart:

The articles comparing the National and American leagues were interesting if for no other reason than somebody finally gave the American League some credit. I agree that the American League was short of star talent a few years ago but they've made tremendous strides. And I'm tired of hearing the cases of Kenny Holtzman and Bill North thrown up as cases of how weak the American League is. Holtzman did throw TWO no-hitters in the so-called powerful National League and the Cubs never gave North a chance. Let North play, let him run, and you have an exciting player. It was another example of the Cubs' penchant for dealing away their good prospects.

Ed Hanlon
Des Plaines

Dear Herald:

If pitching is 70 or 80 or 90 per cent of the game of baseball, then I have to agree that the American League is stronger, as Larry Everhart pointed out in his recent column. It didn't use to be the case, but the American League teams, for the most part, have better depth of starting pitchers.

The White Sox in a period of two weeks have faced Gaylord Perry, Rudy May, Bill Singer, Nolan Ryan, Jim Hunter, Vida Blue, Ken Holtzman, Blue Moon Odom and Bert Blyleven.

You don't run into those stretches of top pitchers in the National League. Sure, there are the Tom Seavers and Bob Gibsons and Steve Carltons, but you don't face the steady diet of strong pitching in the NL.

The National League has made some stupid trades in recent years, trading away the pitching that has helped strengthen the American.

William Woodward
Arlington Heights

Dear Herald:

It's absurd to compare the baseball leagues. Nobody, and I mean nobody, can say the American League is stronger than the National. All you have to do is look at the rosters. What I really think is funny is that a writer who is obviously a White Sox fan rapping the National League. He cuts down a Cubs' fan and writer who raps the American League and then turns right around and pulls the same idea.

Newcomers golf

Dottie Fisher and Diane Spanier tied for low gross honors at 50 to pace the first flight in last Friday's edition of the Arlington Heights Newcomers Golf League.

Fisher and Vonnie Sutter registered birdies. Bea Dunn And Jeanne Fleming matched each other to win the day's event — low putts — with 15 each. Fleming had three pars, as did June Terry. Eloise Harrison had two and Dunn,, Connie Malecki, Jean Derrick, and Sig Dion and all carded one par.

In Flight No. 2, Dee Smith and Fran Valli were double winners with low gross scores of 59. Mary Jane Bloom and Betty Pickard each needed 15 putts to tie for that lead. Valli collected two pars and Marilyn Bies, Barb Hirsch and Eileen Moynahan each carded single pars.

Pat Abbott dominated Flight No. 3, winning low gross, at 57 and low putts with 17. She also parred the 16th hole, as did Wanda Berry. Berry and Helen Snow had pars at No. 12.

Evelyn Anderholm's 68 ruled Flight No. 4. Betty Allenfort and Lollie Woods were deadlocked for the low putts lead at 18.

Biggest pennant margin

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The biggest pennant margin ever was 27½ games by the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1902.

Park Ridge halts Wheeling streak

by PAUL LOGAN

Perfection finally ended for Wheeling's American Legion baseball team.

Playing at Park Ridge Wednesday in a Ninth District game, the young men of Coach Bob Grybash saw some tough calls go against them, some lucky hits fall in and a 9-0 record go down the drain in one inning.

Holding a 1-0 lead heading into the bottom of the fifth, Harper College ace George Pattee gave up three base hits, only one getting out of the infield to load the bases. A fly to center was caught, but the call at the plate was in favor of the hosts.

"That play beat us," said Grybash, who was not too trilled with the umpiring. "A triple and a single followed and that was that."

The 4-1 setback was the first in league play for Wheeling.

Wheeling Post 1968 took the lead in the fifth when Pattee singled in Pat McGinn. The latter had singled and went to second on the catcher's throwing error.

Pattee went the distance although he wasn't supposed to start the game. He fanned four and walked two. Known for his fine control, he was off this time and was behind a lot of the hitters.

SCORE BY INNINGS

Wheeling ..............000 010 0—1-5-2
Park Ridge ........... 000 040 x—4-7-2

Win No. 9 came hours earlier with a 9-1 laugher against visiting Elgin. Bob Peter went the first four innings, allowing three hits and no runs. Gordie Nelson finished up, giving up three more hits and one run.

Wheeling scored all the runs needed for victory in the first on a sacrifice fly run batted in by Keith Steelman and an error.

John Slack helped pad the margin with a two-run homer in the third, making it 4-0.

Peter helped his own cause in the fourth with a triple, scoring shortly after on a sacrifice fly by Sal Fioretti.

Mark Pettit hiked margin to 6-1 in the fifth with an RBI single.

The sixth saw three more Post 1968ers treading the plate. Steve Arnier doubled and scored on Peter's single. John Theriault doubled in one and Slack singled in the other.

Slack and Theriault were 3-for-4 with Peter finishing the day with a pitching win and a 2-for-2 plate showing.

Mount Prospect, Haaning triumph

by JIM COOK

The Mount Prospect American Legion team's pitching corps continued firing bullets against the opposition's blanks Wednesday while running its league record to 2-1 with a 4-0 shutout of Logan Square.

Overall, coach Merv Fink's Prospectors have won three straight — all by shutouts — and now boast a consecutive scoreless streak that spans 21 innings?

Rick Haaning, who carded the first seven string of zeroes against Mundelein Sunday, was back at the controls Wednesday, stopping Logan Square on just three hits, walking nobody and fanning six.

Haaning's adversary, Lion Steve Bobowski pitched well enough to win Logan Square's first Ninth District contest, but the fourth inning, when Mount Prospect sent nine men to the plate, proved the difference.

The Prospectors drew first blood in the third when Jim Anderson walked, stole second and scampered home on Bob Chen's one-base shot to center.

The winners blew the game open in the fourth when the inning, appropriately enough, was started by Haaning's bad-hop single near first base.

Gregg Fink followed with a one-out walk before Randy Sherpin loaded the bases with an infield hit that found Lion Shortstop Jim Bucaro flagging down the grounder and saving a run.

Keith Semar drew the second pass of the inning to force Haaning home and Ken Butzen contributed a run batted in with a sacrifice fly to center for the second out. Mount Prospect, though, benefitted from two more Bobowski walks for its third run of the frame.

Bobowski was touched for only five hits all night, but 10 walks finally spelled the difference. Mount Prospect stranded a whopping 10 runners over six innings before darkness intervened and cut the contest one inning short.

The loss was Logan Square's fifth straight in Ninth District competition and dropped them to 10-13 overall. Mount Prospect boosted its league slate to 2-1 and 7-3 overall.

SCORE BY INNINGS

Mount Prospect ..........001 300—4-5-1
Logan Square .............000 000—0-3-0

Aiello fires no-hitter, doubles in winning marker for Schaumburg

Tony Aiello pitched a no-hitter and doubled home the winning run in the third inning Wednesday evening as Schaumburg defeated Hoffman Estates, 3-0, in Babe Ruth play.

Hurling to his brother, catcher Sam Aiello, Tony faced four men each in the first two innings, then set Hoffman Estates down in order.

Hoffman's Jeff Ironsides reached against Tony in the first when Sam dropped an infield pop not far from the plate. Tony gave a base on balls to Neil Thompson in the second.

Schaumburg touched losing pitcher Ken Gast for its opening run when Tony Aiello doubled after Don Gallagher walked in the third.

Two more runs crossed the plate in the seventh, giving Aiello a comfortable cushion for his last three outs on the mound.

Schaumburg's rally began with a walk to Rick Kuchnia and Art Abraham's triple. After Gary Frontier grounded out, Gallagher lofted a fly ball to center. When Thompson flubbed the catch, Abraham scored easily.

Gast allowed only five hits while losing. He struck out seven and walked five. Aiello had six strikeouts.

Schaumburg's record improved to 5-3-1 while Hoffman dropped to 8-2, its only losses in three years.

Mid-Teen player scores on a walk!

Jeff Schwarz ran circles around everybody on Tuesday as Weber defeated Optimists, 7-2, in Des Plaines Mid-Teen baseball.

Schwarz opened his antics in the visitors' first when he singled, stole second and scored on Steve Semler's hit for a 1-0 lead.

In the second, when Weber scored twice for a 3-0 lead, Schwarz walked but never stopped running at first. When Optimist catcher Terry Quinn realized Schwarz was heading toward second, he let loose with a mighty heave.

But the ball sailed into center, enabling Schwarz to score on a walk! He was preceded home by Bill Finninis who had singled, stolen second and scored easily on Quinn's errant throw.

Schwarz opened Weber's fourth with a walk, then moved around to third when Semler bounced a ground rule double off the Maine West scoreboard.

Carl Metzger followed with a sacrifice fly, putting Weber up 4-0 for winning pitcher Ron Schroeder who went the route with egiht strikeouts and one walk.

Weber's damage was all done to losing pitcher Pete Kesaris. Like Schroeder, he pitched a complete game, but struck out six and walked six.

Optimist touched Schroeder for a single run in the fifth, a rally begun when Paul Kosac reached on Schwarz's infield error.

He stole second and scored when Schwarz threw the ball out of the park on an aborted pickoff attempt. That cut the score to 4-1, but three more Weber runs in the sixth blew it open.

Dave Schultz walked, stole the next two bases and make it 5-1 when Quinn committed his second throwing error.

After Kesaris retired two batters, Doug Unzicker walked and stole second. When Metzger tapped back to the mound, Kesaris threw the ball down the right field line. Unzicker scored run No. 6 and Metzger came in one batter later when Schroeder tripled.

Optimist got its last run off Schroeder in the seventh when Quinn Haase doubled and Kosac singled.

Four area teams register triumphs in summer league

Expected to be much tougher than they were, the Addsion Trail Blazer team just didn't measure up to those teams in the past. Or, quite possibly, Wheeling's just much better.

Whatever the case might be, the Wildcats hosted the Blazers and won in a romp, 8-3, in high school Summer League play.

After two innings, it was 7-0. A ho-hummer.

Wheelnig's Al Newman's run-scoring single and a two-run double by Ken Margalski made it 3-0 in the first.

Then the second inning saw four more dance home. Gary Wennerstrom doubled in one and two passed balls, three straight walks and an error on the catcher.

Bob Straus iced the contest in the fifth by doubling in Howie Brauer.

Wennerstrom went the distance, striking out six, walking three and allowing just three hits.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Addison Trail | 001 | 200 | 0—3-2-3 |
| Wheeling | 340 | 010 | x—8-5-3 |

ARLINGTON WINS, 3-2

Arlington — playing the only team to beat Wheeling — won in dramatic style in the bottom of the seventh against visiting Dundee, 3-2.

Jay Colloton, who had led off the seventh with a single, was tripled in by War Schell.

Arlington took the lead in the first inning as Dundee pitching forced in two Cardinal runners with bases on balls. Receiving the RBI free passes were Kevin Dick and Bob McGarvey.

Setting up the bases loaded situation with an error, single, sacrifice and walk were Fransic Splitt, Art Busby, Brett Frase and Brian Stebbins, respectively.

Phil Losos went the distance, striking out six and walking three.

SCORE BY INNINGS

|---|---|---|---|
| Dundee | 002 | 000 | 0—2-5-1 |
| Arlington | 200 | 000 | 1—3-4-2 |

SCHAUMBURG FALLS

Schaumburg scored but couldn't score enough in losing to Crown 8-2.

Trailing 4-0 leading into the bottom of the fifth, Schaumburg pushed across two runs before being blanked the rest of the way. Gary Merchant singled, moved up on a walk to Ray Fairbanks and both scored on a double by Mike Halatek.

Brian Youngberg pitched the whole game, giving up 12 hits. However, his teammates could only muster three in seven innings. Doug Olson had the other safety.

FREMD RALLIES FOR WIN

Fremd cut loose for four runs in the fifth inning and held on to defeat Maine South, 7-5, in a darkness-shortened, six-inning contest.

Trailing 5-3 upon entering the bottom of the fifth, the Vikes paraded 10 men to the plate with the benefit of three of Maine South's six errors.

With one out, Bob Burke reached on an error at short, Mark Otteman walked and Randy Kraft drove in one on the second misplay of the frame. Another error loaded the bases before relief hurler Mitch Gullett contributed a two-run single and Bill Bullard a one-run safety.

Maine South jumped in front 1-0 in the first, but Fremd came roaring back with a pair in the same inning when Scott Orbin drew a two-out walk and Kraft followed with his first of two hits for the evening. A delayed doublesteal permitted Kraft to eventually cross with the second tally of the frame.

With Maine South owning a 4-2 advantage, the Vikes chipped away for another marker in the third on Jeff Brisson's single, an out-less fielder's choice and Kraft's run-producing single.

Gullett, who's been on a hitting binge with five hits in six trips, was credited with the save in relief of starter Jim Recher who fanned six. Fremd boosted its record to 8-1 in summer league play.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Maine South | 121 | 010—5-3-6 |
| Fremd | 201 | 040—7-6-6 |

PITCHING POWERS PROSPECT

Pitching remained the key to Prospect's impressive 7-1 summer league record and masterful 4-2 triumph over Rolling Meadows.

The Knights received another standout performance from Mike Chumra who silenced the Mustangs on just two hits, walking one and whiffing three.

Meadows jumped ahead in the first inning when Prospect's defense accounted for the game's first run. Brad Davidson reached on an error, took second on a wild pickoff attempt and scored on the third Prospect misplay of the frame.

The Knights drew into a 1-1 deadlock in the second when one swing of the bat by Mike Radoll powered a pitch over the rightfield fence.

Prospect gained a 2-1 edge in the fourth on Mike Quade's single and Kevin Kelley's run-scoring double, but Meadows quickly forced another tie in the sixth on a walk, to Davidson, an error and a single by Dave Thorstensen.

Prospect's winning two-run rally in the sixth was boosted by three walks and Chumra's two-run single. The lefthander has now yielded just two earned runs in three games. Dan Jordan absorbed the loss for Meadows who slipped to 3-5-1 on the season.

SCORE BY INNINGS

|---|---|---|---|
| Rolling Meadows | 100 | 001 | 0—2-2-0 |
| Prospect | 010 | 102 | x—4-6-3 |

FENTON SOCKS HERSEY

Fenton took advantage of a half dozen Hersey errors and numerous walks to waltz to an 8-3 decision over the Huskies in a Wednesday night summer league game.

Fenton tallied four times in the third inning and got four in the fourth. Hersey coach Harvey Foster said, "The first four runs we gift-wrapped for them, but they earned the second four." Fenton's fourth-inning uprising included a home run and a triple.

Scott Topcewski, the first of a trio of Hersey pitchers, was saddled with the loss. Bob Huber and Gary Hart also saw some action on the mound.

The Huskies posted single markers in the first, fifth and seventh innings. They took a short-lived 1-0 lead in the first when Tom Vetta singled, took second on a wild pitch, advanced to third on an infield out and scored on Tom Good's sacrifice fly to center.

In the fifth, Dave Carey got a single to right which the Fenton outfielder misplayed into a three-bagger. Don Bianchi forced Carey at the plate, but after Art Hoesterey walked, Vetta delivered an RBI single.

Paul Cortes led off the Hersey seventh with a triple. He was singled home by Carey for the last Huskie run. Carey died on the basepaths.

SCORE BY INNINGS

The Elk Grove-Barrington game scheduled for Wednesday night has been relsated for July 19, according to Elk Grove coach Larry Peddy.

Annen & Busse moves into Tuesday golf lead

A new divisional leader popped up Tuesday night as Annen & Busse Realtors toppled league-leading Kirchoff Insurance 7-3, and took over first place in Tuesday night Mount Prospect Twilight Golf League competition.

This was the second meeting this season for the two rivals, with this one ending the same way as the May 8 struggle with a 7-3 Annen & Busse victory. The play-off this weekend was unscheduled, being part of the league's mid-season position night activity, when first place meets second place, etc.

Setting the pace for Annen & Busse was "D" position player Bill Skibbe, who easily took two points from opponent Bob Brackman, and then won the bonus point with his low individual net of 29.

Dick Elliott of A & B with 1½ points slipped past Sig Hellstrom, who took ½ point. Dick Lemay also contributed 1½ points to the cause in his match with Hal Jauch.

Carl Anderson was the only winner for Kirchhoff's, with his two-point over Art Perivolidis.

Other position night results found George L. Busse & Co. back in second place after whipping Illinois Range 7½-2½, and Morton Pontiac moved up another slot after their 8-2 win over Mike's Marathon Service.

Keefer's Pharmacy cashiered Mount Prospect State Bank 7½-2½, and J & B Meat Market butchered Licht's Paint Store with a similar 7½-2½ score.

Biggest excitement of the session prevailed in the lowest echelon, as last place Louie's Barber Shop put together their second victory of the 1973 season and moved out of the cellar with a 10 point grand slam, clean sweep over Busse-Biermann Hardware.

Low shooter for the evening was Ed Pociask of George L. Busse & Co., who came home with a 38 gross, while Hal Wolff took low net homers with a remarkable 44 gross 28 net.

Birdies were reported by Joe Mortell No. 16 and No. 18; Don Raab No. 16; and Bob Braeckman No. 18.

Devon-Higgins to host District V tournament

The best of the Devon-Higgins Babe Ruth League will be one of five contingents seeking top honors in the District V All-Star baseball tournament next week.

Devon-Higgins will host the tourney at Margaret Lange Memorial Park in Rosemont for the second time in three years.

Competition gets under way on Tuesday with the championship struggle scheduled for Saturday. The consolation title game is set for 1 p.m. Saturday, followed by the title game.

In the event of inclement weather, windup games will be put off to the same times on Sunday.

Joining Devon-Higgins in the tourney will be West Cicero, Edgebrook Sauganash, South Cicero, and Marcin.

The Devon-Higgins Giants (Schullo Plumbing) placed six representatives on the All-Star roster—Glen Watson, Brett Grishaber, Matt Serna, Bob Smith, Andy Wild and Bob Ryza.

Selected from other teams were:

Alternates are George Craig, Mike Rapacz, Paul Messina, Eric Karg and Jim Ginger.

Bob Grishaber, manager of the Giants, will pilot the All-Stars. His coaches will be Ed Smith and Jim Gages.

The tournament schedule is as follows:

Tuesday — 5:30 p.m., West Cicero vs. Edgebrook Sauganash; Thursday — 5:30 p.m., South Cicero vs. Devon-Higgins; Friday — 5:30 p.m., Marcin vs. winner of game No. 1; Saturday — 1 p.m., loser of game No. 2 vs. loser of game No. 3; 3:30 p.m. (title game), winner of game No. 2 vs. winner of game No. 3.

With half of regular season schedule completed, the Giants — defending champions — again are atop the standings with a 6-2 mark. The Cardinals (5-4), Pirates (3-3), and the Dodgers (1-6) follow.

Serna (3-0) and Watson (2-0) have been the Giants' mound mainstays while Watson and Bob Smith have paced the hitting attack.

Four area teams register triumphs in summer league

Expected to be much tougher than they were, the Addsion Trail Blazer team just didn't measure up to those teams in the past. Or, quite possibly, Wheeling's just much better.

Whatever the case might be, the Wildcats hosted the Blazers and won in a romp, 8-3, in high school Summer League play.

After two innings, it was 7-0. A ho-hummer.

Wheelnig's Al Newman's run-scoring single and a two-run double by Ken Margalski made it 3-0 in the first.

Then the second inning saw four more dance home. Gary Wennerstrom doubled in one and two passed balls, three straight walks and an error on the catcher.

Bob Straus iced the contest in the fifth by doubling in Howie Brauer.

Wennerstrom went the distance, striking out six, walking three and allowing just three hits.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Addison Trail | 001 | 200 | 0—3-2-3 |
| Wheeling | 340 | 010 | x—8-5-3 |

ARLINGTON WINS, 3-2

Arlington — playing the only team to beat Wheeling — won in dramatic style in the bottom of the seventh against visiting Dundee, 3-2.

Jay Colloton, who had led off the seventh with a single, was tripled in by War Schell.

Arlington took the lead in the first inning as Dundee pitching forced in two Cardinal runners with bases on balls. Receiving the RBI free passes were Kevin Dick and Bob McGarvey.

Setting up the bases loaded situation with an error, single, sacrifice and walk were Fransic Splitt, Art Busby, Brett Frase and Brian Stebbins, respectively.

Phil Losos went the distance, striking out six and walking three.

| Dundee | 002 | 000 | 0—2-5-1 |

SCHAUMBURG FALLS

Schaumburg scored but couldn't score enough in losing to Crown 8-2.

Trailing 4-0 leading into the bottom of the fifth, Schaumburg pushed across two runs before being blanked the rest of the way. Gary Merchant singled, moved up on a walk to Ray Fairbanks and both scored on a double by Mike Halatek.

Brian Youngberg pitched the whole game, giving up 12 hits. However, his teammates could only muster three in seven innings. Doug Olson had the other safety.

FREMD RALLIES FOR WIN

Fremd cut loose for four runs in the fifth inning and held on to defeat Maine South, 7-5, in a darkness-shortened, six-inning contest.

Trailing 5-3 upon entering the bottom of the fifth, the Vikes paraded 10 men to the plate with the benefit of three of Maine South's six errors.

With one out, Bob Burke reached on an error at short, Mark Otteman walked and Randy Kraft drove in one on the second misplay of the frame. Another error loaded the bases before relief hurler Mitch Gullett contributed a two-run single and Bill Bullard a one-run safety.

Maine South jumped in front 1-0 in the first, but Fremd came roaring back with a pair in the same inning when Scott Orbin drew a two-out walk and Kraft followed with his first of two hits for the evening. A delayed doublesteal permitted Kraft to eventually cross with the second tally of the frame.

With Maine South owning a 4-2 advantage, the Vikes chipped away for another marker in the third on Jeff Brisson's single, an out-less fielder's choice and Kraft's run-producing single.

Gullett, who's been on a hitting binge with five hits in six trips, was credited with the save in relief of starter Jim Recher who fanned six. Fremd boosted its record to 8-1 in summer league play.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Maine South | 121 | 010—5-3-6 |
| Fremd | 201 | 040—7-6-6 |

PITCHING POWERS PROSPECT

Pitching remained the key to Prospect's impressive 7-1 summer league record and masterful 4-2 triumph over Rolling Meadows.

The Knights received another standout performance from Mike Chumra who silenced the Mustangs on just two hits, walking one and whiffing three.

Meadows jumped ahead in the first inning when Prospect's defense accounted for the game's first run. Brad Davidson reached on an error, took second on a wild pickoff attempt and scored on the third Prospect misplay of the frame.

The Knights drew into a 1-1 deadlock in the second when one swing of the bat by Mike Radoll powered a pitch over the rightfield fence.

Prospect gained a 2-1 edge in the fourth on Mike Quade's single and Kevin Kelley's run-scoring double, but Meadows quickly forced another tie in the sixth on a walk, to Davidson, an error and a single by Dave Thorstensen.

Prospect's winning two-run rally in the sixth was boosted by three walks and Chumra's two-run single. The lefthander has now yielded just two earned runs in three games. Dan Jordan absorbed the loss for Meadows who slipped to 3-5-1 on the season.

SCORE BY INNINGS

|---|---|---|---|
| Rolling Meadows | 100 | 001 | 0—2-2-0 |

FENTON SOCKS HERSEY

Fenton took advantage of a half dozen Hersey errors and numerous walks to waltz to an 8-3 decision over the Huskies in a Wednesday night summer league game.

Fenton tallied four times in the third inning and got four in the fourth. Hersey coach Harvey Foster said, "The first four runs we gift-wrapped for them, but they earned the second four." Fenton's fourth-inning uprising included a home run and a triple.

Scott Topcewski, the first of a trio of Hersey pitchers, was saddled with the loss. Bob Huber and Gary Hart also saw some action on the mound.

The Huskies posted single markers in the first, fifth and seventh innings. They took a short-lived 1-0 lead in the first when Tom Vetta singled, took second on a wild pitch, advanced to third on an infield out and scored on Tom Good's sacrifice fly to center.

In the fifth, Dave Carey got a single to right which the Fenton outfielder misplayed into a three-bagger. Don Bianchi forced Carey at the plate, but after Art Hoesterey walked, Vetta delivered an RBI single.

Paul Cortes led off the Hersey seventh with a triple. He was singled home by Carey for the last Huskie run. Carey died on the basepaths.

The Elk Grove-Barrington game scheduled for Wednesday night has been reslated for July 19, according to Elk Grove coach Larry Peddy.

Annen & Busse moves into Tuesday golf lead

A new divisional leader popped up Tuesday night as Annen & Busse Realtors toppled league-leading Kirchoff Insurance 7-3, and took over first place in Tuesday night Mount Prospect Twilight Golf League competition.

This was the second meeting this season for the two rivals, with this one ending the same way as the May 8 struggle with a 7-3 Annen & Busse victory. The play-off this weekend was unscheduled, being part of the league's mid-season position night activity, when first place meets second place, etc.

Setting the pace for Annen & Busse was "D" position player Bill Skibbe, who easily took two points from opponent Bob Brackman, and then won the bonus point with his low individual net of 29.

Dick Elliott of A & B with 1½ points slipped past Sig Hellstrom, who took ½ point. Dick Lemay also contributed 1½ points to the cause in his match with Hal Jauch.

Carl Anderson was the only winner for Kirchhoff's, with his two-point over Art Perivolidis.

Other position night results found George L. Busse & Co. back in second place after whipping Illinois Range 7½-2½, and Morton Pontiac moved up another slot after their 8-2 win over Mike's Marathon Service.

Keefer's Pharmacy cashiered Mount Prospect State Bank 7½-2½, and J & B Meat Market butchered Licht's Paint Store with a similar 7½-2½ score.

Biggest excitement of the session prevailed in the lowest echelon, as last place Louie's Barber Shop put together their second victory of the 1973 season and moved out of the cellar with a 10 point grand slam, clean sweep over Busse-Biermann Hardware.

Low shooter for the evening was Ed Pociask of George L. Busse & Co., who came home with a 38 gross, while Hal Wolff took low net homers with a remarkable 44 gross 28 net.

Birdies were reported by Joe Mortell No. 16 and No. 18; Don Raab No. 16; and Bob Braeckman No. 18.

Devon-Higgins to host District V tournament

The best of the Devon-Higgins Babe Ruth League will be one of five contingents seeking top honors in the District V All-Star baseball tournament next week.

Devon-Higgins will host the tourney at Margaret Lange Memorial Park in Rosemont for the second time in three years.

Competition gets under way on Tuesday with the championship struggle scheduled for Saturday. The consolation title game is set for 1 p.m. Saturday, followed by the title game.

In the event of inclement weather, windup games will be put off to the same times on Sunday.

Joining Devon-Higgins in the tourney will be West Cicero, Edgebrook Sauganash, South Cicero, and Marcin.

The Devon-Higgins Giants (Schullo Plumbing) placed six representatives on the All-Star roster—Glen Watson, Brett Grishaber, Matt Serna, Bob Smith, Andy Wild and Bob Ryza.

Selected from other teams were:

Alternates are George Craig, Mike Rapacz, Paul Messina, Eric Karg and Jim Ginger.

Bob Grishaber, manager of the Giants, will pilot the All-Stars. His coaches will be Ed Smith and Jim Gages.

The tournament schedule is as follows:

Tuesday — 5:30 p.m., West Cicero vs. Edgebrook Sauganash; Thursday — 5:30 p.m., South Cicero vs. Devon-Higgins; Friday — 5:30 p.m., Marcin vs. winner of game No. 1; Saturday — 1 p.m., loser of game No. 2 vs. loser of game No. 3; 3:30 p.m. (title game), winner of game No. 2 vs. winner of game No. 3.

With half of regular season schedule completed, the Giants — defending champions — again are atop the standings with a 6-2 mark. The Cardinals (5-4), Pirates (3-3), and the Dodgers (1-6) follow.

Serna (3-0) and Watson (2-0) have been the Giants' mound mainstays while Watson and Bob Smith have paced the hitting attack.

River Trails net club adds touted instructor

Carol Ramsey Shogren, a native of Los Angeles who taught at the Pancho Gonzales camp in Malibu, Calif., then served two seasons at the Libertyville (Ill.) Racquet Club, has joined the indoor instructional staff at River Trails Tennis Center, Mount Prospect.

Now Mrs. James Shogren of Hoffman Estates, Carol will handle both group and private lessons at River Trails, beginning in October. This summer she is playing a heavy tournament schedule throughout the Western Tennis Association, the body covering Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin which last year ranked her No. 22.

At 18, in California, Carol won the Ventura County (Santa Barbara) junior girls' championship and was runner-up in the women's. She is a member of the United States Professional Tennis Association.

Last summer at Libertyville she supervised the Illinois State girls' 18-and-under and 16-and-under tournaments, the boys' counterparts of which are held annually at River Trails. Her fellow instructors this fall at the Mount Prospect facility will be Nick Barone of Des Plaines, three-time Illinois State men's champion; Ken Mackowiak of Des Plaines, the Chicago District's No. 14 player, and Jim Marshall of Schaumburg, a teacher-coach at Sanborn Junior High School, Palatine.

Girls' tennis talent at River Forest

The best girls' tennis talent in the Midwest will be on display this week at River Forest Tennis Club where the seven-member Chicago District team will aim for its third successive Western title against the challenges of nine other regions from Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and West Virginia.

The three-day round-robin event started yesterday. Each interregional duel will consist of six singles matches and three doubles.

Heading the Chicago forces, recruited from Cook, Lake and DuPage counties, will be national 18-and-under indoor champion Sue Graham of Northfield and 15-year-old Susie Replogle of River Forest, the state high school champion who ranked 16th nationally last year as a 14-and-under. Other squad members are Sally Good, 17, River Forest; Donna Yuritic, South Holland, the state high school runner-up; Dionne Buwick, 18, Glen Ellyn; Ann Arries, 16, Northfield, and Kathy Stearns, 15, Winnetka.

Team No. 4 gains first-place tie

John Dennis and John Newman both carded net 36s to lead Team No. 4 to a 6-0 victory over Team No. 7 and into a tie for the Buehler YMCA Monday Golf League lead with Team No. 2.

Both have 20 points, with Team No. 5 third at 16½. Team No. 5 got 36s from King Chisholm and James Costello to down Team No. 3, 5-1. Ronald Thill racked up a 37 for the losers.

Raoul Wargny shot the night's low of 34 to pace Team No. 1 past Team No. 6, 4-2. Sam Hallingsworth shot a 36 for Team No. 6.

Team No. 7 remained in last place despite Gordon Hackamier's nifty 35.

River Trails net club adds touted instructor

Carol Ramsey Shogren, a native of Los Angeles who taught at the Pancho Gonzales camp in Malibu, Calif., then served two seasons at the Libertyville (Ill.) Racquet Club, has joined the indoor instructional staff at River Trails Tennis Center, Mount Prospect.

Now Mrs. James Shogren of Hoffman Estates, Carol will handle both group and private lessons at River Trails, beginning in October. This summer she is playing a heavy tournament schedule throughout the Western Tennis Association, the body covering Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin which last year ranked her No. 22.

At 18, in California, Carol won the Ventura County (Santa Barbara) junior girls' championship and was runner-up in the women's. She is a member of the United States Professional Tennis Association.

Last summer at Libertyville she supervised the Illinois State girls' 18-and-under and 16-and-under tournaments, the boys' counterparts of which are held annually at River Trails. Her fellow instructors this fall at the Mount Prospect facility will be Nick Barone of Des Plaines, three-time Illinois State men's champion; Ken Mackowiak of Des Plaines, the Chicago District's No. 14 player, and Jim Marshall of Schaumburg, a teacher-coach at Sanborn Junior High School, Palatine.

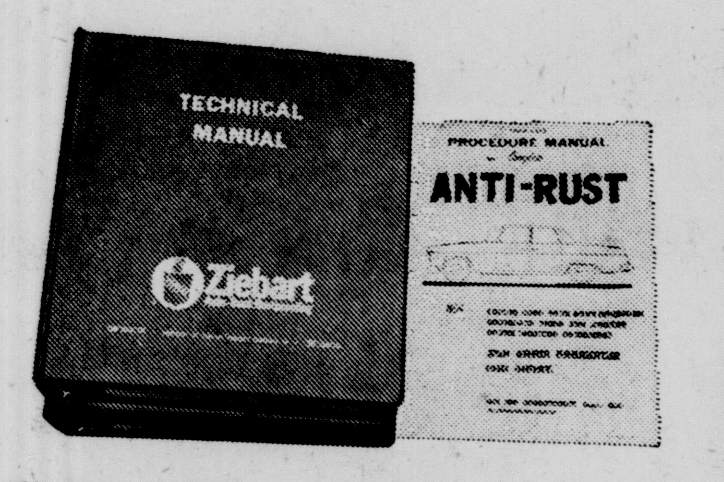
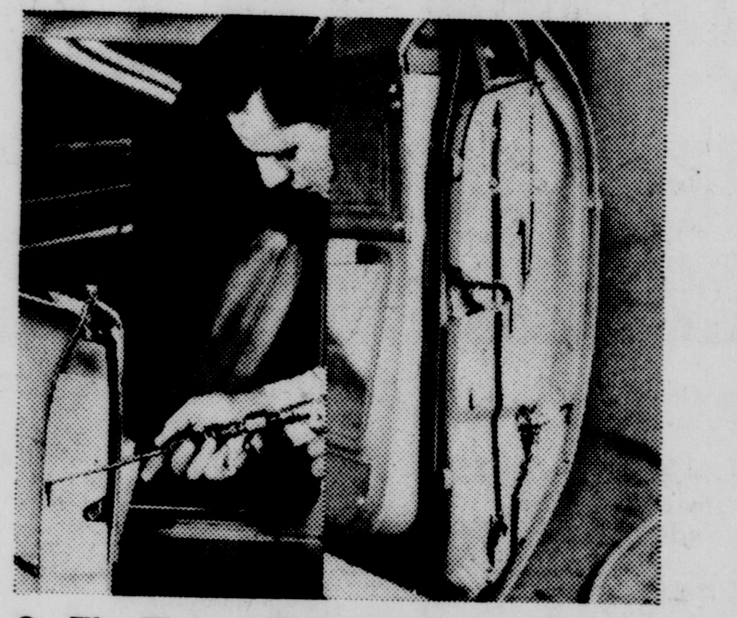
We defy you to order a car dealer's "rustproofing" now that you know all about Ziebart rustproofing:



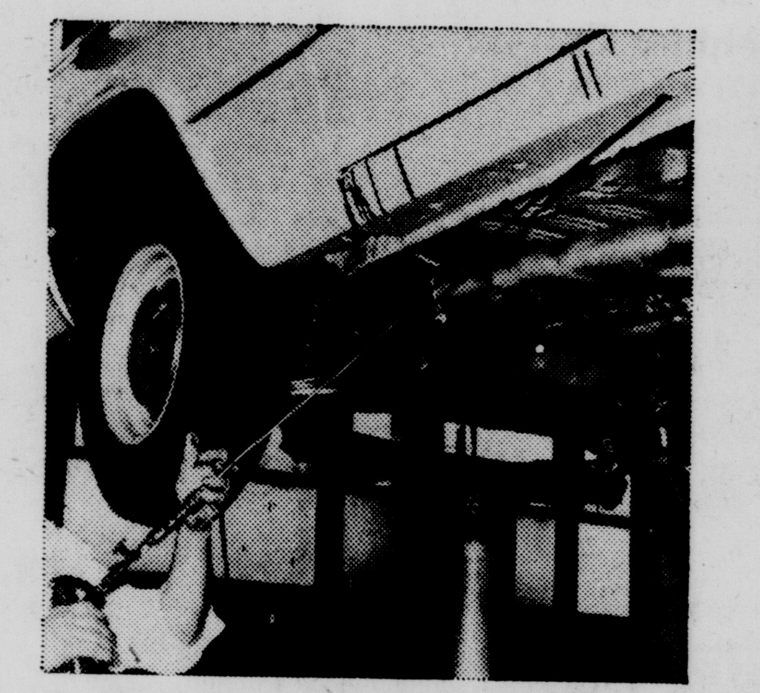
1. If you think your car dealer's "rustproofing" is factory approved, forget it.

No car manufacturer has the facilities to train rustproofing specialists. Or technical manuals for each and every car. Or specialized tools. (Where most "rustproofers" have two or three tools, we have nine. All patented.) Whatever a car dealer offers you is his own responsibility.



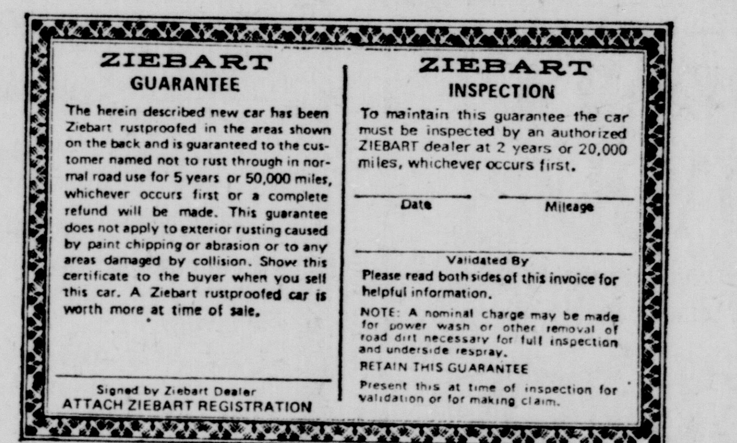
2. The Ziebart Process. Guaranteed to run and drip. And work.

Anybody who says he has "drip-proof" rustproofing doesn't have real rustproofing. Our sealant runs so it can penetrate seams—even welded seams. It runs, covers, spreads—protects. That's why rustproofing takes a full day at Ziebart: Only after the running and dripping is complete do we give you your new car back.



3. Would you believe we know more about the inside of your new car than any car dealer?

Being specialists, we are experts in our line of work. We use new car drawings as well as blueprints to determine exactly where the boxed-in, hidden areas are on every car. And just as important, we know where not to drill holes that might weaken or even damage your new car.



ZIEBART
GUARANTEE
The herein described new car has been Ziebart rustproofed in the areas shown on the back and is guaranteed to the customer named not to rust through in normal road use for 5 years or 50,000 miles, whichever occurs first or a complete refund will be made. This guarantee does not apply to exterior rusting caused by paint chipping or abrasion or to any areas damaged by collision. Show this certificate to the buyer when you sell this car. A Ziebart rustproofed car is worth more at time of sale.
Signed by Ziebart Dealer
ATTACH ZIEBART REGISTRATION

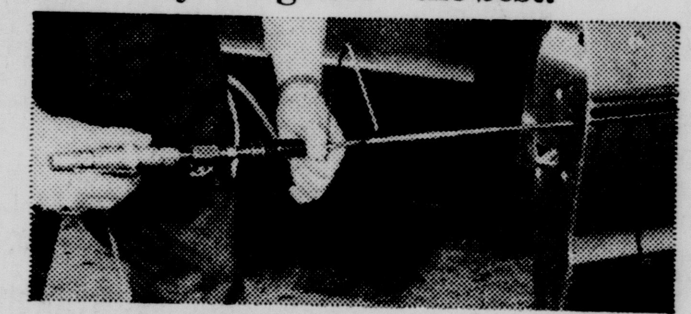
ZIEBART
INSPECTION
To maintain this guarantee the car must be inspected by an authorized ZIEBART dealer at 2 years or 20,000 miles, whichever occurs first.
Date
Mileage
Validated By
Please read both sides of this invoice for helpful information.
NOTE: A nominal charge may be made for power wash or other removal of road dirt necessary for full inspection and underside respray.
RETAIN THIS GUARANTEE
Present this at time of inspection for validation or for making claim.

4. We give you a guarantee you can depend on.

It's a real guarantee. A full, money-back guarantee. A 5-year/50,000-mile new car guarantee against rust-through that's good at any Ziebart location worldwide. If you need service, your guarantee will be honored.

5. 1,000 car and truck fleet managers could have picked any "rustproofing." Instead, they picked Ziebart.

Ask the guys who make their living buying and selling cars and trucks. We rustproof for the U.S. government. For the City of Detroit. For major companies like Olin Corporation. For N.A.S.A. And unlike some "rustproofers", we don't use one grade of sealant to meet government specs and another grade on your car. We have only one grade—the best.



6. It's all we do for a living. We have to do it better.

Rustproofing is what we do all day, every day. Our people are all trained in Ziebart technical schools. All of them use our exclusive patented spray tools.

7. The only way to get rustproofing "as good as Ziebart" or "the same as Ziebart" is to get Ziebart rustproofing.

Sure, you may be told by your car salesman that you'll get something "as good". Because word gets around about just how good our process is. But now you know that there is no way to get Ziebart rustproofing from a car dealer. No way. The best thing you can do for your new car is to say "No thanks." Then come see us.

And if you don't get it here, you're not getting Ziebart rustproofing:

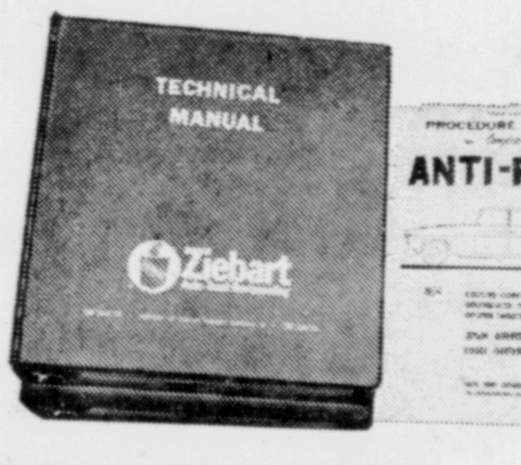
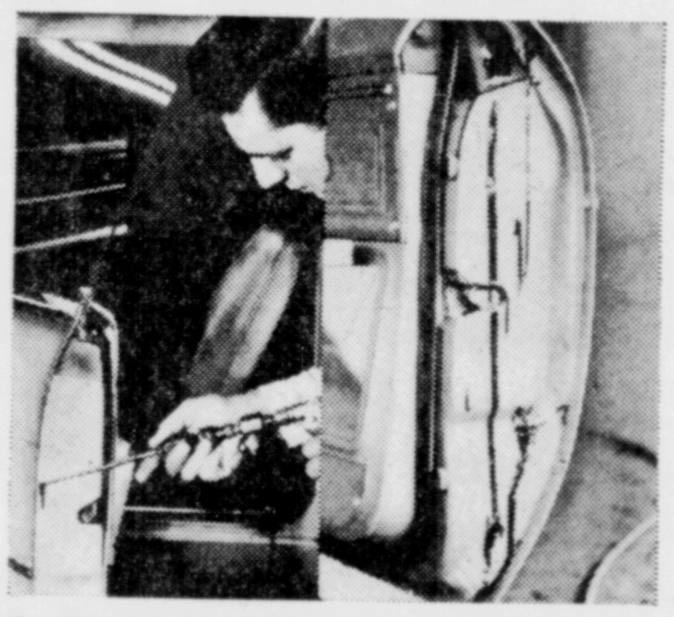
We defy you to order a car dealer's "rustproofing" now that you know all about Ziebart rustproofing:



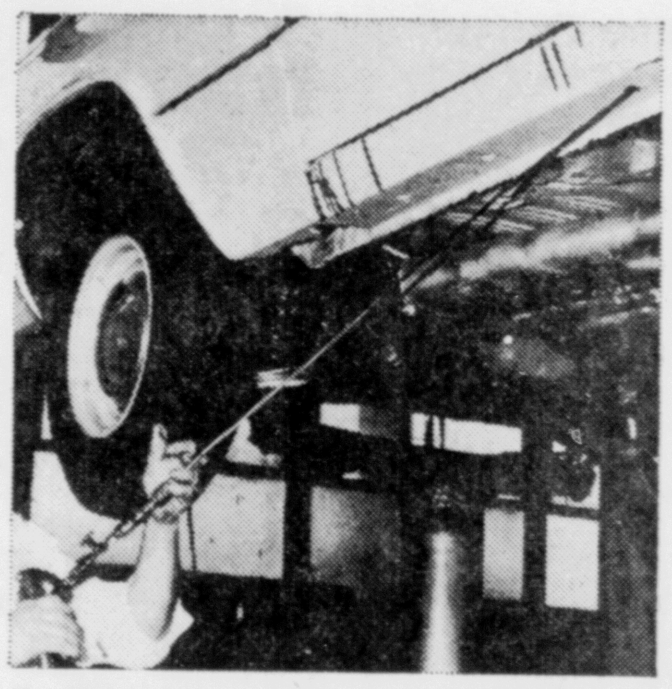
1. If you think your car dealer's "rustproofing" is factory approved, forget it.

No car manufacturer has the facilities to train rustproofing specialists. Or technical manuals for each and every car. Or specialized tools. (Where most "rustproofers" have two or three tools, we have nine. All patented.) Whatever a car dealer offers you is his own responsibility.



2. The Ziebart Process. Guaranteed to run and drip. And work.

Anybody who says he has "drip-proof" rustproofing doesn't have real rustproofing. Our sealant runs so it can penetrate seams—even welded seams. It runs, covers, spreads—protects. That's why rustproofing takes a full day at Ziebart: Only after the running and dripping is complete do we give you your new car back.



3. Would you believe we know more about the inside of your new car than any car dealer?

Being specialists, we are experts in our line of work. We use new car drawings as well as blueprints to determine exactly where the boxed-in, hidden areas are on every car. And just as important, we know where not to drill holes that might weaken or even damage your new car.

GUARANTEE

The herein described new car has been Ziebart rustproofed in the areas shown on the back and is guaranteed to the customer named not to rust through in normal road use for 5 years or 50,000 miles, whichever occurs first or a complete refund will be made. This guarantee does not apply to exterior rusting caused by paint chipping or abrasion or to any areas damaged by collision. Show this certificate to the buyer when you sell this car. A Ziebart rustproofed car is worth more at time of sale.

Signed by Ziebart Dealer

ZIEBART
INSPECTION

To maintain this guarantee the car must be inspected by an authorized ZIEBART dealer at 2 years or 20,000 miles, whichever occurs first.

Date Mileage

Validated By

Please read both sides of this invoice for helpful information.

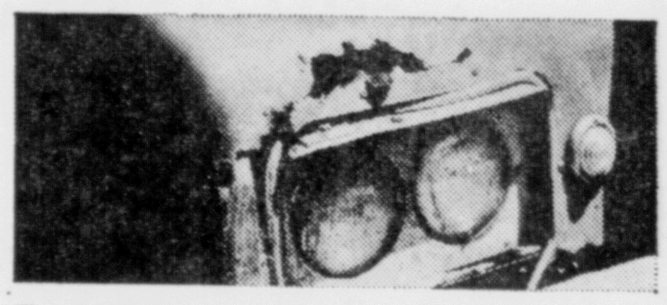
NOTE: A nominal charge may be made for power wash or other removal of road dirt necessary for full inspection and underside respray.

RETAIN THIS GUARANTEE

Present this at time of inspection for validation or for making claim.

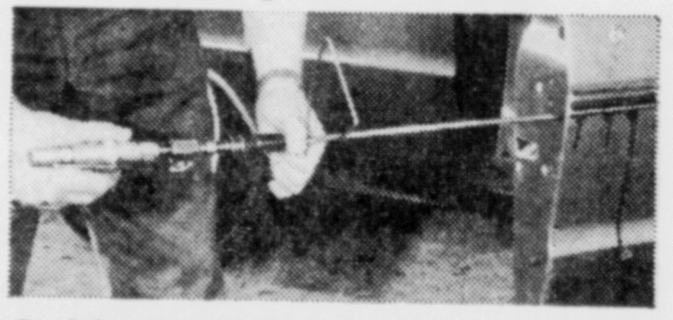
4. We give you a guarantee you can depend on.

It's a real guarantee. A full, money-back guarantee. A 5-year/50,000-mile new car guarantee against rust-through that's good at any Ziebart location worldwide. If you need service, your guarantee will be honored.



5. 1,000 car and truck fleet managers could have picked any "rustproofing." Instead, they picked Ziebart.

Ask the guys who make their living buying and selling cars and trucks. We rustproof for the U.S. government. For the City of Detroit. For major companies like Olin Corporation. For N.A.S.A. And unlike some "rustproofers", we don't use one grade of sealant to meet government specs and another grade on your car. We have only one grade—the best.



6. It's all we do for a living. We have to do it better.

Rustproofing is what we do all day, every day. Our people are all trained in Ziebart technical schools. All of them use our exclusive patented spray tools.

7. The only way to get rustproofing "as good as Ziebart" or "the same as Ziebart" is to get Ziebart rustproofing.

Sure, you may be told by your car salesman that you'll get something "as good". Because word gets around about just how good our process is. But now you know that there is no way to get Ziebart rustproofing from a car dealer. No way. The best thing you can do for your new car is to say "No thanks." Then come see us.

And if you don't get it here, you're not getting Ziebart rustproofing:

A HAT AND A HELMET go flying but Logan Square pitcher Mike Cook (11) hurdles a sprawling Rick Sidor of Arlington beyond first base in Tuesday night's American Legion game. Sidor had hit a ground ball to first which Lion first sacker Jim Dumke booted. It was picked up by second baseman Mark Rickerson, who overthrew Cook covering first. The double error allowed Sidor to advance to second but Cook's nifty stepping averted any injuries. Arlington won the game 3-1.

THE GALA BALLROOM of O'Hare International Tower was the site of last week's grand opening of the new airport hotel. The feast included a sailboat of seafood.

THERE'S ONE PLACE at the O'Hare Tower where things never quiet down until time to close. That's the Speakeasy of the new Gaslight Club which caters to a lively crowd and features a Dixieland band. The Gaslight girls join in with their own Gay Nineties dance routines.

The O'Hare Tower

A mecca of diversion

by GENIE CAMPBELL

O'Hare International Tower is officially open for business.

Celebrating its grand opening last week, the $25 million hotel, with its unique service facilities and entertainment features, is drawing a mixed clientele of jet passengers and Chicago area residents.

For air travelers, the new hotel located at O'Hare International Airport, only steps away from the baggage claim areas, offers certain advantages other hotels will be hard-pressed to outdo.

One can walk from the airport to the hotel and moving sidewalks make that abbreviated distance seem even shorter.

Seven new restaurants, four of them specializing in ethnic cuisine, augment the dining pleasures of the airport itself.

NO LONGER is there a need for grounded travelers to meander, memorizing the gift shops, or stand up drinking against a congested bar.

Special day rates offered by O'Hare Tower invite people to use a room for napping, watching television or even to freshen up with a shower.

If you live in the surrounding area, chances are you won't be needing a place to shower or sleep. However, with a new five-story garage to make airport parking much less of a hassle, O'Hare International Tower becomes prime target for a different kind of evening outing.

New dining opportunities constitute the primary attraction.

FOR DOMESTIC appetites, there are the O'Hare Room, the hotel's main restaurant, and the American Coffee Shop, open 22 hours a day and designed for short orders and fast service.

Yet more enticing are the four ethnic restaurants that have just opened on the lower arcade level.

These include Le Monde, a French bistro; the Crown Pub, an English pub; the Swiss Hutte, a Swiss delicatessen; and the Balkan Grill, featuring a menu of Middle and Eastern European foods.

French onion soup, cheeses, a variety of crepes and espresso coffee are on the menu at Le Monde which is patterned after a typical French bistro or cafe.

The decor, originated by Norman R. DeHaan Associates of Chicago (interior design firm for the entire hotel), follows a Jules Verne nautical theme highlighted by a ship's wheel, brass fixtures, portholes, collector prints, sextants and ship models along the walls. Seating capacity is small, only 30 people.

YOU CAN'T begin to talk about the Swiss Hutte without including fondue. That's a specialty of the small delicatessen but so are quiche lorraine, cheeses and sausages, topped off with Swiss chocolate for dessert.

The largest and most elegant of the hotel's ethnic restaurants, the Balkan Grill, utilizes the colors, textures and designs appropriate to the Balkan countries.

Authenticating an old world atmosphere are imported wood carvings by Balkan craftsmen that are displayed throughout the dining room.

The musical strains of the violin provide a melodic background as Antonio and his Strolling Gypsy Violinists keep mellowed customers relaxed and entertained.

MIGHT I recommend a bowl of hearty Serbian Bean Soup? Careful, it's a meal in itself. Also on the menu are pork and lamb dishes along with shish-ka-bob and chicken-on-a-spit. All meals are served with rice and a special Balkan salad. Both American and Turkish coffee are available.

DeHaan surveyed 79 London pubs before deciding on the decor of the Crown Pub which is enhanced with stained glass windows and pieces of pewter and silver. Suggestions for a light meal might be a beef sandwich, English truffles or a bowl of cheddar cheese soup.

For a bigger piece of the action, the place to be is the new Gaslight Club located on the lobby level.

A plush, lavishly decorated hallway in gay nineties motif leads visitors into the main room that is dominated by a large crystal chandelier rescued from a German castle.

BUT ALAS, THE Gaslight Club is private, though hotel guests are provided a key to use for free admittance during their stay.

While entertainment is low key in the front room where a pianist is supplemented with volunteer vocalists from the lineup of Gaslight girls, the Speakeasy next door is a bit livelier.

It's still Gaslight but less informal. Baskets of popcorn grace each table and a Dixieland Band takes over on stage alternating with Charleston-stepping girls who have it tough . . . waiting on tables all night and also filling in as part-time showgirls.

In visiting the hotel for the first time it is interesting to note the problems scaled in constructing a hotel in the middle of a large metropolitan airport.

MOST IMPORTANT, to assure a clear view for aircraft controllers, the hotel was limited to 10 stories, not very high in comparison to today's skyscrapers.

Activated charcoal filters were incorporated into the ventilating system to keep out the nauseating kerosene fumes ever present around O'Hare.

Yet one of the biggest problems in designing the hotel was finding a suitable solution to control the exterior noise levels caused by the continual din of jet engines and terminal traffic. It often peaks at 110 decibels which is near the human threshold level for pain.

A sound-absorbent glass, considered a sophisticated safety glass, was finally used in the construction along with the heaviest reinforced concrete. The glass is actually two quarter-inch panes separated by a layer of plastic. Sound levels inside the hotel are 32 decibels, equivalent to the sound level of a suburban bedroom.

THE SIZE OF O'Hare International Tower is certainly deceiving. It looks rather petite sandwiched between a half moon of terminal buildings and acres of parking spaces. Yet in addition to housing 979 rooms, various restaurants, shops and boutiques, the new hotel has 10 large meeting/banquet rooms and one Gala Ballroom.

"Space and Flight," the overall interior design of the airport hotel, is commemorated with aviation artifacts and more contemporary art pieces.

The banquet rooms are named after world-famous aviation pioneers and an authentic World War I airplane engine with wooden propeller is mounted in the Kittyhawk Bar adjacent to the O'Hare Room.

In contrast is the fine art collection commissioned for the hotel which includes more than 150 pieces ranging from oils, acrylics and silk screens to tapestries and lithographs.

THE PIANIST in the Gaslight Club has to share the limelight with the lovely lady above him.

LARGEST OF the four new ethnic restaurants located on the arcade level of O'Hare International Tower is the Balkan Grill, featuring authentic cuisine from Middle and Eastern Europe. Antonio, left, will be featured as nightly entertainment along with his Strolling Band of Gypsy Violinists. Other ethnic dining at O'Hare Tower includes Swiss, English and French.

Yet one of the biggest problems in designing the hotel was finding a suitable solution to control the exterior noise levels caused by the continual din of jet engines and terminal traffic. It often peaks at 110 decibels which is near the human threshold level for pain.

A sound-absorbent glass, considered a sophisticated safety glass, was finally used in the construction along with the heaviest reinforced concrete. The glass is actually two quarter-inch panes separated by a layer of plastic. Sound levels inside the hotel are 32 decibels, equivalent to the sound level of a suburban bedroom.

THE SIZE OF O'Hare International Tower is certainly deceiving. It looks rather petite sandwiched between a half moon of terminal buildings and acres of parking spaces. Yet in addition to housing 979 rooms, various restaurants, shops and boutiques, the new hotel has 10 large meeting/banquet rooms and one Gala Ballroom.

"Space and Flight," the overall interior design of the airport hotel, is commemorated with aviation artifacts and more contemporary art pieces.

The banquet rooms are named after world-famous aviation pioneers and an authentic World War I airplane engine with wooden propeller is mounted in the Kittyhawk Bar adjacent to the O'Hare Room.

In contrast is the fine art collection commissioned for the hotel which includes more than 150 pieces ranging from oils, acrylics and silk screens to tapestries and lithographs.

THE PIANIST in the Gaslight Club has to share the limelight with the lovely lady above him.

LARGEST OF the four new ethnic restaurants located on the arcade level of O'Hare International Tower is the Balkan Grill, featuring authentic cuisine from Middle and Eastern Europe. Antonio, left, will be featured as nightly entertainment along with his Strolling Band of Gypsy Violinists. Other ethnic dining at O'Hare Tower includes Swiss, English and French.

Shopping for antiques in England and Scotland can be summed up in one word — expensive! In the northern provinces I did find a few bargains, but the closer one gets to London the higher the prices. I really can't understand how American dealers do their shopping over there and come back home to make a profit. It's true that very recent inflationary trends have caused a big jump in prices in England, according to everyone I spoke with.

"Market Days," when the local inhabitants spread their wares out on carts and on tables in the centers of the small towns, may still produce an occasional good buy, but we weren't lucky enough to find many market days to coincide with our schedule.

Back in London, we visited the regular flea markets, giant weekly sales at which hundreds of dealers exhibit their wares, both new and old, but try to convince you it's all old. One dealer assured me the flow blue china on his table was from 1860, when in fact it is available at gift shops in America and I told him so. He gave me a haughty "harumph" and turned to the next looker. But generally, dealers were friendly, just as the guide books say.

SOME OF THE flea markets are set up permanently in buildings, open one or two days a week, such as the Chelsea and the Antiquarius. Here stalls, or what we would call booths, are about the size of a broom closet, and each dealer plumps in the center of his own little menage on a comfortable chair, sipping a "mineral" and keeping an eagle eye peeled for a live one. The sell is hard and not much truth in advertising.

I heard some of the strangest stories. Anything vaguely Oriental in appearance had belonged to the Shah of Iran, and every oil painting, it seemed, had come direct from a famous castle,where it had belonged to the 16th Earl of Twiddleham. Just like home, except that in America, George Washington slept in it or Abraham Lincoln rocked in it.

Since the "fleas" are open on certain days of the week, it's good to know before you travel halfway across the city if you have the proper day. The biggest and most fun of all was the Bermondsey Market, open early — very early — on Fridays. Several streets are thronged with everything from antiques to live poultry, and the bargaining and selling is lively. You can reach Bermondsey Market by cab, double decker bus or by "tube," and the tube station is called Elephant and Castle. The market opens at 7 a.m. and closes at 2 p.m., but many of the dealers started to pack up at noon.

THE ANTIQUES are almost all of English origin, with a goodly sprinkle of Orientalia, jewelry and silver. Art Deco is very big, but I didn't see anything to compare with our American Depression glass. I had thought some of it might have emigrated.

One dowager type with a little poodle dog in her arm strolled through the tightly packed aisles at Bermondsey, surrounded on all sides by hundreds of thousands of knick-knacks, antiques, novelties and junk. She gave me a friendly nod and sais "It becomes more and more difficult to find bits and oddments nowadays, doesn't it?" Since we were entirely surrounded by "bits and oddments," I wondered exactly what she was looking for.

One of my Quester friends who lived in London for some time told me about seeing a "Victorian fly catcher," a curious glass contrivance meant to hold sugared water and attract flies in its trap bottom. At the Chelsea Market one of the dealers held up a bottle-shaped glass with a depression in its bottom and asked if we ladies could guess what that might be? Remembering my friend's story, I ventured "A Victorian fly catcher?" I think I scored two points for our side.

If you wish a copy of a list of the flea markets and antique centers in London, you may send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Grace Carolyn Dahlberg, in care of Paddock Publications, Box 230, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Liveright, $6.95

In his years of maintaining the Nixon watch, columnist Osborne has grown increasingly critical of the present administration. So the reception given this collection of opinion will depend largely on individual political beliefs.

While studiously attempting to keep his views balanced, Osborne seems to have become disenchanted enough with Nixon's actions in the 1972 election year to have turned his writing rather accusatory and hostile.

Still, he strives for objectivity. For instance, he ignored the June arrest of the Watergate buggers, explaining in retrospect: "Put it down to my reluctance to believe the possible worst about Richard Nixon."

All in all, for political perception, for reasoned observation, few chroniclers of the Washington maelstrom come close to Osborne. The words are accompanied by Paul Conrad's devastating cartoons.

L.A.'s Light Opera sends its hits to Broadway

by JACK GAVER

There is something besides the motion picture industry out there in Los Angeles, a something that now and then supplies the Broadway theater with a smashing hit.

That something is the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera (CLO), which is the long way to spell Edwin Lester, and Hollywood wishes it could be as consistently successful as this theater operation that marked its 35th year in May.

The birthday almost coincided with the world premiere in San Francisco of the stage version of a musical "Gigi" that brought back to the stage, after 13 years, one of its most potent partnerships, book and lyrics by Alan Jay Lerner, music by Frederick Loewe.

It is a show that Broadway is counting on heavily to spark its season next fall, and it is the result of the suggestion by Edwin Lester. The Lerner-Loewe team was sundered more than a dozen years ago by a Loewe heart attack that persuaded him to "retire" for good.

EDWIN LESTER. Not too well known to the general theater-going public. A dapper, musically knowledgeable, dedicated impresario. He created a theatrical empire representing 15 annual weeks of playing time between Los Angeles and San Francisco with a subscription guarantee for three or four shows that is good for more than a $1.5 million gross.

More than 35 years ago, this New Yorker went to Los Angeles and became the first piano soloist on stage at Grauman's Million Dollar Theater in the movie palace era. A little later he produced the musical prologues which preceded the films at Sid Grauman's celebrated new edifice, Grauman's Chinese Theater.

Lester felt that Los Angeles deserved something more in the way of stage entertainment than the crumbs that the whims of New York producers might send that way in the form of usually inferior touring companies.

HIS MODEST first season, in 1938, offered Los Angeles four shows during a five-week period for a total budget of $100,000. He presented such oldies as "Blossom Time," "The Student Prince," "New Moon" and "Roberta," which introduced Bob Hope to West Coast audiences. His venture resulted in an alliance with impresario Homer Curran of San Francisco, and the two-city operation was born.

There are now 150,000 subscribers in Los Angeles and 90,000 in San Francisco. The annual budget is $6 million, and $800,000 has been spent this year on "Gigi," which is a new version of the celebrated motion picture of that title that Lerner and Loewe created 15 years ago.

"Gigi," of course, is Broadway-bound, and Lester's organization will share in any profits accruing after the Los Angeles-San Francisco run, just as it has with such past hits as "Song of Norway," "Kismet" and Mary Martin's "Peter Pan" musical, all of which Lester originated and sent to New York.

Carole King apparently took an average city street corner as the inspirational source for "Fantasy" (Ode). The album is filled with everyday people, including a frustrated job applicant, a welfare mother, a bored housewife and a drug addict.

Carole King

Each of the portraits in this delightful fantasy suite is meticulously drawn by Miss King's lyrics. The tunes begin and end with a "Fantasy" explanation. In the opening, she sings: "I may step outside myself and speak as if I were someone else."

What puts this album near the top of Miss King's output, however, is the varied musical backgrounds — much more so than in her previous albums. The music ranges from an upbeat Latin tempo in "Corazon" to the soaring strings used in "Being At War With Each Other."

The accommodations people often use to make their lives livable are the subject of songs like "Weekdays," the tale of the bored housewife, and "Haywood," the dope addict.

THERE ARE TWO disquieting aspects to this otherwise fine album. The songs often get preachy, as if Miss King knows the solutions to our problems. Then too, the boredom comes through much plainer than the suffering of her characters, leading me to wonder if she could ever adequately portray suffering in one of her songs.

I really don't think she wants to give us more than a glimpse of suffering. There is a telltale line in "Believe In Humanity" that reads: "I believe if I really looked at what's going on I would lose faith I never could recover."

For her listeners to keep that same faith they too must be careful in what they look at, especially in her songs. Right now she is successfully treading a line, but if she falls off, her songs could easily become meaningless, sugary nothings.

The long-awaited new George Harrison album, "Living In the Material World" (Apple), is somewhat disappointing.

Mostly, the album suffers from uneven pace and song quality. Too often Harrison falls into the trap of using very preachy lyrics. He's found religion and now he wants to have everyone else find it too.

"Give Me Love," the single, is as good as any of the songs to illustrate the point. Here the musicianship is the best part of the song, particularly Harrison's slide guitar. However, lines like "keep me free from birth" actually sound ridiculous.

When Harrison is not flaunting his new-found spirituality, he is cussing out the "material" world and those who wish he was still a little mop-haired Beatle. "Sue Me, Sue You Blues" is a bitter telling of the Beatles' split and subsequent legal hassles. (John Lennon had much more flair when he tackled the same subject. He wrote a great song about Paul McCartney called "How Do You Sleep At Night.")

THE GENTLE "The Light That Has Lighted the World" and the title song are the album's best. Both have good vocals along with the skillful playing of Harrison and friends Nicky Hopkins, Gary Wright, Klaus Voorman, Ringo Starr, Jim Horn, Jim Keltner and Jim Gordon.

"The Lord Loves The One" also has a nice tune and helps one to forget the rather dull "Be Here Now" or the overblown "Try Some, Buy Some" (which is a drug putdown song coproduced by Phil Spector).

Harrison's fans will certainly enjoy the album, but I think they too might just start waiting for his next album after a few listens to this one.

"Sing It Again Rod" (Mercury) is a collection of 12 hits by Rod Stewart. The album cover is designed like a glass of scotch on the rocks and the music inside is a very fine brand.

The gravel-throated singer sings "Reason to Believe," "You Wear It Well," "Mandolin Wind," "Maggie May," "Twisting the Night Away," and "Pinball Wizard" to name half. It's great party music and great mood music and if you don't have the originals, you'd best get this album.

Marianne Ball Johnson of Des Plaines is currently exhibiting her art work at Cathony Gallery in Chicago. Her paintings were on display in Milwaukee, Wis. during April and she is scheduled to show her work at the Design Gallery in Madison, Wis., during October.

Publicity chairman of Des Plaines Art Guild, Mrs. Johnson attended the Art Institute of Chicago. Though exploring various mediums, she prefers using oils applied with a palette knife. One specialty of hers is decorative oil paintings on weathered barnwood.

Folk songstress goin' her own way

by MICHAEL S. BARRETT

Mary Travers is more than a singer who helped pave the way for the folk onslaught of the '60s. She is electric, politically minded, concerned about America and the way we all live.

Miss Travers, the "Mary" of the folk trio, Peter, Paul and Mary, has been on her own since 1970 when she, Peter Yarrow and Paul Stookey were "divorced," and she has been working steadily on television, college campuses, night club floors and the stage of Carnegie Hall.

For a week in July in St. Louis she takes on a new role, that of Nellie Forbush, the bubbly Mary Martin character of "South Pacific." It will be the second time in her career that she has performed in musicals. Her first experience was in the chorus line of "The Next President," a 1957 Broadway flop.

Miss Travers' career as a solo performer in the past three years has been gratifying, she said in an interview. She has three records — two of them big sellers — and a fourth in the works. The chances of Peter, Paul and Mary coming together again are nil.

"I wouldn't accept anything. You come to a point where it would be very easy to do that, but very destructive in terms of one's own career," she said.

"I think Peter and Paul are much too serious about what we did than to potsky with it," she said. "It's not a thing to take lightly.

"We took it as an enormous responsibility at the time. I take it as an enormous responsibility now, as I'm sure they do. It's tawdry to become a caricature of your own self."

One reason she has become so independent is the success she scored at Carnegie Hall earlier this year.

"It had a lot of special qualities about it because New York was where I was brought up," she said, "And no matter what you say, it is the big apple — for very irrational reasons it becomes very important . . . Carnegie has a certain elan, a certain ambience, a certain status."

Miss Travers was born in Louisville, Ky., but grew up in Greenwich Village. She joined a group known as the Song Swappers, then performed in the Broadway musical, meeting Peter and Paul in 1961. The decade that followed was a turbulent period that saw the rise of the black man in America, the assassination of a President, the escalation of a war thousands of miles from home and a violent presidential convention in Chicago.

"In that 10-year period I was exposed to an awful lot of important moments in history," she said. "And because of he nature of who I was, I played a part in it. I was with Sen. Eugene McCarthy at the window in Chicago . . . and saw the children he saw."

She participated in the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King's civil rights march on Washington in 1963, the 1965 Selma, Ala., march for racial equality, and the beginnings of the antiwar movement. The songs Peter, Paul and Mary sang often were or became radical comments on society: "Blowin' in the Wind," "If I Had a Hammer," "All My Trials," "Too Much of Nothing."

Miss Travers now wants to put it down in writing.

"I'm writing a book, for Delacourt. Basically it is a book about growing up in New York, the logical questions of who I am, where I am and why I have been doing what I have been doing all these years. And about the '60s, how they came about, what they really were in my opinion, why folk music was popular, why it is now, the political ramifications of music and how it interrelates, and how society is reflected in its music and vice versa."

She wonders how current events — even Watergate — will reflect in music.

"The events taking place in America politically will be mirrored by music, if you believe in the theory that music is a mirror of society — which I do," she said. "You will see a struggle for a more truthful, a more constructive reaching out in the music to communicate with the people, such as we had in the '60s. . .

"If someone would give me a roadmap of what happens politically, I could tell you what happens musically. I don't think it's politics — I think it's a whole, total societal reaction."

PENCIL POSIES

Materials: 36-inch piece of yarn
12-inch piece of yarn
pencil

Pencil posies are fun to make. Her's how: Lay the 12-inch piece of yarn along the pencil. Starting at one end, wrap the 36-inch piece of yarn loosely around and around both the pencil and the 12-inch piece of yarn. (Figure A). Push the yarn loops together. Knot the ends of the 12-inch yarn together tightly around the loops. This will form a puffy flower. Glue a small button or bead in the center.

Pencil posies can be tied to hair clips or safety pins so you can wear them. They also make pretty gift package decorations. Can you think of other ways to use them?

PENCIL POSIES

Materials: 36-inch piece of yarn
12-inch piece of yarn
pencil

Pencil posies are fun to make. Her's how: Lay the 12-inch piece of yarn along the pencil. Starting at one end, wrap the 36-inch piece of yarn loosely around and around both the pencil and the 12-inch piece of yarn. (Figure A). Push the yarn loops together. Knot the ends of the 12-inch yarn together tightly around the loops. This will form a puffy flower. Glue a small button or bead in the center.

Pencil posies can be tied to hair clips or safety pins so you can wear them. They also make pretty gift package decorations. Can you think of other ways to use them?

Mary Travers

Folk songstress goin' her own way

by MICHAEL S. BARRETT

Mary Travers is more than a singer who helped pave the way for the folk onslaught of the '60s. She is electric, politically minded, concerned about America and the way we all live.

Miss Travers, the "Mary" of the folk trio, Peter, Paul and Mary, has been on her own since 1970 when she, Peter Yarrow and Paul Stookey were "divorced," and she has been working steadily on television, college campuses, night club floors and the stage of Carnegie Hall.

For a week in July in St. Louis she takes on a new role, that of Nellie Forbush, the bubbly Mary Martin character of "South Pacific." It will be the second time in her career that she has performed in musicals. Her first experience was in the chorus line of "The Next President," a 1957 Broadway flop.

Miss Travers' career as a solo performer in the past three years has been gratifying, she said in an interview. She has three records — two of them big sellers — and a fourth in the works. The chances of Peter, Paul and Mary coming together again are nil.

"I wouldn't accept anything. You come to a point where it would be very easy to do that, but very destructive in terms of one's own career," she said.

"I think Peter and Paul are much too serious about what we did than to potsky with it," she said. "It's not a thing to take lightly.

"We took it as an enormous responsibility at the time. I take it as an enormous responsibility now, as I'm sure they do. It's tawdry to become a caricature of your own self."

One reason she has become so independent is the success she scored at Carnegie Hall earlier this year.

"It had a lot of special qualities about it because New York was where I was brought up," she said, "And no matter what you say, it is the big apple — for very irrational reasons it becomes very important . . . Carnegie has a certain elan, a certain ambience, a certain status."

Miss Travers was born in Louisville, Ky., but grew up in Greenwich Village. She joined a group known as the Song Swappers, then performed in the Broadway musical, meeting Peter and Paul in 1961. The decade that followed was a turbulent period that saw the rise of the black man in America, the assassination of a President, the escalation of a war thousands of miles from home and a violent presidential convention in Chicago.

"In that 10-year period I was exposed to an awful lot of important moments in history," she said. "And because of he nature of who I was, I played a part in it. I was with Sen. Eugene McCarthy at the window in Chicago . . . and saw the children he saw."

She participated in the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King's civil rights march on Washington in 1963, the 1965 Selma, Ala., march for racial equality, and the beginnings of the antiwar movement. The songs Peter, Paul and Mary sang often were or became radical comments on society: "Blowin' in the Wind," "If I Had a Hammer," "All My Trials," "Too Much of Nothing."

Miss Travers now wants to put it down in writing.

"I'm writing a book, for Delacourt. Basically it is a book about growing up in New York, the logical questions of who I am, where I am and why I have been doing what I have been doing all these years. And about the '60s, how they came about, what they really were in my opinion, why folk music was popular, why it is now, the political ramifications of music and how it interrelates, and how society is reflected in its music and vice versa."

She wonders how current events — even Watergate — will reflect in music.

"The events taking place in America politically will be mirrored by music, if you believe in the theory that music is a mirror of society — which I do," she said. "You will see a struggle for a more truthful, a more constructive reaching out in the music to communicate with the people, such as we had in the '60s. . .

"If someone would give me a roadmap of what happens politically, I could tell you what happens musically. I don't think it's politics — I think it's a whole, total societal reaction."

Sandy Dennis starring in Ivanhoe's 'Streetcar'

by GENIE CAMPBELL

The 25th anniversary production of Tennessee Williams' "A STREETCAR NAMED DESIRE" opens next Thursday at the IVANHOE THEATRE, 3000 N. Clark St.

The opening marks the return of SANDY DENNIS, who has not performed at the Ivanhoe since "Bus Stop" was staged in 1970. In the Williams drama she will play the role of Blanche DeBois.

Joining her on stage will be DAVID WILSON, JAMES BRODERICK and ROCHELLE OLIVER.

First performed in New York in 1947, "A Streetcar Named Desire" has received both the Pulitzer Prize and New York Drama Critics Circle Award.

The drama is also being honored in both Los Angeles and New York with 25th anniversary productions. The Chicago production is directed by Ivanhoe producer-director, GEORGE KEATHLEY.

Linda Merrill

Tuesday was opening night for LINDA MERRILL whose show will be the attraction through July 28 in the TACK ROOM of ARLINGTON PARK TOWERS. She keeps the crowds happy with such popular tunes as "Sunshine of My Mind" and "I'll Be There" though I much preferred hearing songs that aren't performed so often such as "Sunrise, Sunset" and "If I Were a Rich Man" from the musical "Fiddler on the Roof." Some of Linda's numbers would be even more effective if her backup accompaniment were toned down.

"NEVADA" SMITH is a musician with individual talent. Playing guitar for Linda, he also does some very impressive solos of his own.

Also featured are CRAIG SMITH on the organ and piano, and Steve Ondo on percussion.

"1776" is now into its final weeks at CANDLELIGHT DINNER PLAYHOUSE with closing set for July 22.

"OLIVER,"A MUSICAL about an orphan boy's adventures in Victorian London's underworld, previews at Candlelight Aug 7 with an official opening Aug. 16.

KAREN-JOE & THE INNER CIRCLE open an eight week engagement at the CHICAGO MARRIOTT'S WINDJAMMER LOUNGE next Wednesday.

College sweethearts wed

The very first class at Northeast Missouri State University, Kirksville, last fall changed the lives of two students just starting their college careers.

Dru Ann Gardzelewski of Mount Prospect and Steve Mark Douglas of Bettendorf, Iowa, met in that class and fell in love. By April they were engaged and on June 3 the pair was married in St. Emily's Catholic Church, Mount Prospect.

A graduate of Hersey High School, Dru Ann is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gardzelewski, 1210 N. Hemlock Lane. Steve is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Douglas of Bettendorf and has taken his bride to his hometown to live.

He works for Eagle Signal Co. in nearby Davenport, and Dru Ann is employed in Bettendorf by Jewel Tea Co.

THEIR DOUBLE ring ceremony took place at four in the afternoon, with a dinner following at the House of the White Eagle in Niles. One hundred guests greeted the newlyweds there.

For the festivities, the bride chose a white organza gown trimmed with French pin pleating and embroidered lace. The lace edged the high neck, short puffed sleeves and the chapel-length veil which complemented the gown. Two rows of the pleating accented a square cut bib on the bodice front and were repeated on the hem of the floor-length skirt.

A Juliet cap of lace held the bride's veil. Her bouquet was a nosegay of white tea roses, stephanotis, baby's breath and ivy.

THE BRIDAL attendants were all gowned alike in a pink and peach floral print on white chiffon and wore pink picture hats to match. Their nosegay bouquets were composed of pink and white tea roses and baby's breath tied with pink streamers.

Valerie J. Chamberlain of Syracuse, N.Y., was the maid of honor and Jill Gardzelewski, the bride's sister, was bridesmaid. Four Bettendorf friends of the groom were his attendants. Mark Anderson was best man; Bill Malito, groomsman; and Paul Wessel and Dave Holle, ushers.

Dru Ann and Steve had a three-day honeymoon at The Abbey at Lake Geneva before leaving for Bettendorf.

Bridesmaid makes big splash at the poolside reception

The reception was held around the pool, so it was bound to happen. The maid of honor got dunked.

The soaked maid was Laurie Yoder of Mount Prospect, who along with the bride's family, had traveled from Mount Prospect to Mesa, Ariz., for the wedding June 2 of Melissa Jo DeKoatz to Richard Besenhofer.

Melissa is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. DeKoatz, 205 S. Lancaster, and Richard is the son of former Mount Prospect residents Charles Besenhofer, Chicago, and Mrs. John Fiedler, Mesa. The buffet reception was held at the Fiedlers' pool following the wedding in Scottsdale Presbyterian Church, Scottsdale, Ariz.

The double ring service was held at 5 p.m. with Melissa wearing a white Dacron polyester organza printed with yellow roses. The gown was fashioned with bertha collar on the scooped neckline, a yellow organza cummerbund with panels down the back, and ruffled flounce at the hemline. A yellow lace picture hat and colonial nosegay of daisies, baby's breath, yellow rosebuds and ivy completed her ensemble.

For something old and also borrowed, Melissa wore an antique brooch originally belonging to her great-great-grandmother which now belongs to her mother.

THE WATER didn't really harm Laurie's yellow polyester seersucker gown. It was Empire styled with scooped neckline trimmed with lace of the same yellow, short, puffed sleeves and wide lace ruffle at the hemline. She carried a wicker basket of daisies and ivy and also wore daisies in her hair.

George Sheppard, Mount Prospect, was best man, and ushers were Jerry Besenhofer, brother of the groom from Mount Prospect, and Brian DeKoatz, brother of the bride, Wheeling.

Melissa, a '71 graduate of Prospect High School, also graduated from the Career Training Center in Mesa, and is employed by First National Bank of Arizona, Tempe. Richard completed two years of high school while living in Mount Prospect, but was graduated from a Mesa high school. He then studied at Harper College, Palatine, and is now a senior at Arizona State University, Tempe, majoring in psychology.

The newlyweds honeymooned for a week on a trip to San Diego and are now living at 960 N. Orange, Mesa.

It's fashion

Short, natural hairdos for women are causing happiness in hat factories across the land. The hat business, off in recent years, expects a 20 per cent increase in units sold this year. The Millinery Institute of America says a dent was put in the hat business by wigs and teased hairdos — neither of which are meant for hats. That's why the cheering over the popularity of the short, natural hairdos.

What's helping to put zest in the hat industry: Teenagers and other females under 30. They've discovered hats — but not the kind cartoonists joked about for generations, those nondescript flowerpot type hats. The current most popular hat is a floppy brimmed type made of denim or felt or soft leather. It looks good with jeans or mini skirts. It even looks good with vare feet.

Sign up now for 'Mainstream' seminar

A seminar at Harper College July 12, "Into the Mainstream," could answer many questions for area women who have been considering the combining of family responsibilities with study, employment or volunteer work.

The $5 registration fee, due by Friday, July 6, includes lunch. Babysitting will be available at $2 for each pre-school child.

Reservations may be made by phoning the Harper Continuing Education office at 397-3000, Ex. 233.

Several options available to women will be presented during a 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. seminar. Group discussion will provide time in which counselors can help with individual concerns.

THE SEMINAR program has been planned by Virginia M. Coplan and Carole A. Wilk of Applied Potential, a counseling service specializing in guidance and career development for women, who will set the tone for the day with the keynote address, "Changing Patterns for Women."

The psychological needs of women will be discussed; also attitude changes in society, legislation and employers. They will describe how a woman can fit into these new patterns and combine new options with family responsibilities.

A panel discussion from 10:30 a.m. until noon in "Fields for Women" will include a question-answer period.

Panel member Don A. Olson will give information on opportunities in the health field. Dr. Olson is director of training at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago and is an associate professor at Northwestern University Medical School.

"How does this affect me?"

"I've been out of touch for so long — who would want to hire me?"

"What if my husband doesn't want me to work ?"

"What do I do first? Whom do I see?"

"How can I convince an employer to try me part-time, or to let me share a job with another part-timer?"

"I know I need more education. How could I compete with younger students?"

The seminar is one in a series of special programs presented for women at Harper College, coordinated by Doe Hentschell.

Harper College is located at Algonquin and Roselle Roads, Palatine.

Dear Dorothy: I've had great success washing my fiberglass bathroom curtains. I do them by hand, dipping them over and over in sudsy water in the kitchen sink. Folded accordion fashion and hung by clothespins, they drip nearly dry in the garage. I hang them back up a bit damp to complete drying, and they look like new. My problem is the living room draperies — 18 feet in two separate panels of lovely fiberglass. They are 12 years old and came with the house. They were dirty then and I haven't done a thing about them for fear they would break from age or weight in washing. Any suggestion on what to do with them? — Pat Small Just wash them. As far as I can gather, these materials never wear out. Being large they will be hard to handle so do half a panel at a time in the tub, washing and rinsing, then do the other half. Carefully get them over the shower rod to drip dry — and adjust them to hang just as they do at present.

Dear Dorothy: Any reader with a bruise on their furniture might like to try my way of bringing it out. I wet the bruised area with warm water, then lay over it several thicknesses of brown paper which have been soaked in warm water. Then I apply a warm iron until the moisture is gone. One treatment usually does the trick, though it can be repeated if need be. — Frances Jewett

Several options available to women will be presented during a 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. seminar. Group discussion will provide time in which counselors can help with individual concerns.

THE SEMINAR program has been planned by Virginia M. Coplan and Carole A. Wilk of Applied Potential, a counseling service specializing in guidance and career development for women, who will set the tone for the day with the keynote address, "Changing Patterns for Women."

The psychological needs of women will be discussed; also attitude changes in society, legislation and employers. They will describe how a woman can fit into these new patterns and combine new options with family responsibilities.

A panel discussion from 10:30 a.m. until noon in "Fields for Women" will include a question-answer period.

Panel member Don A. Olson will give information on opportunities in the health field. Dr. Olson is director of training at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago and is an associate professor at Northwestern University Medical School.

Employment possibilities in government and federal agencies is the topic for panel member Pat Schwingle, associate Equal Employment Opportunity representative, Chicago Region of U. S. Civil Service Commission.

Clarine Hall, executive director for Girl Scouts of Northwest Cook County, will explain how volunteer experience can lead to professional employment.

A representative of the Small Business Administration, (SBA), Joseph E. Clermont, will discuss how an individual goes about starting a small business. He will explain the services of the SBA offices.

Reading at lunch will be encouraged; special materials will be provided for this purpose. Also during the 12 to 1 p.m. "working lunch," work perference inventories will be completed.

During the afternoon, counselors will lead small groups of participants in discussions of material presented during the morning sessions. Opportunity will be given for individuals to voice their personal concerns.

THESE CONCERNS might include such questions as :

"How does this affect me?"

"I've been out of touch for so long — who would want to hire me?"

"What if my husband doesn't want me to work ?"

"What do I do first? Whom do I see?"

"How can I convince an employer to try me part-time, or to let me share a job with another part-timer?"

"I know I need more education. How could I compete with younger students?"

The seminar is one in a series of special programs presented for women at Harper College, coordinated by Doe Hentschell.

Harper College is located at Algonquin and Roselle Roads, Palatine.

Methodism: the 'church of the poor'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Methodist Church, known as "the church of the poor" as it moved west with the American frontier, is the subject of the second of a series of articles on the religious faiths of Americans. Additional articles will be appearing each Friday.

by LOUIS CASSELS

In the 19th Century, as the American frontier moved steadily westward, the Methodist Church moved with it.

It was known then as "the church of the poor." Its hallmarks were simplicity in worship and doctrine, a zeal for social action to improve the plight of oppressed people, and a passionate attachment to the cause of temperance.

Today, in a largely urban and technological society, Methodist churches draw most of their members from the affluent middle class.

Worship has grown more formal, with robed choirs and ministers in academic gowns or clerical collars.

In doctrine, simplicity has given way to bewildering, almost chaotic diversity. Surveys of Methodist clergy and laity regularly turn up a spectrum of theological beliefs ranging all the way from rigorous fundamentalism to frank agnosticism about the divinity of Christ and the reality of God.

Social action continues to be a major preoccupation. But modern Methodists are deeply divided about it, and many conservative Methodists are bitterly opposed to their denomination's liberal stands on such contemporary issues as helping blacks and other minorities gain economic and political power.

Temperance — meaning total abstinence from alcohol — remains a cherished official teaching of Methodism. But millions of Methodists, exercising the Protestant prerogative to set aside any teaching they find unconvincing or inconvenient, privately condone moderate social use of alcoholic beverages.

THE METHODIST movement grew out of the preaching of John Wesley, an 18th Century Church of England priest who wanted to reform his own denomination rather than start a new one.

The turning point in Wesley's life came on the evening of May 24, 1738. He attended a prayer meeting at a little chapel on Aldersgate Street in London. As he sat in meditation, listening to someone read aloud from Martin Luther's writings, the young priest suddenly comprehended what Luther meant when he said men are saved through faith in Christ, and not by any good works of their own.

"I felt my heart strangely warmed," Wesley wrote later. "I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone, for my salvation; and an assurance was given me that He had taken away my sins."

From that moment, John Wesley was a changed man. He had been an ascetic, scholarly, self-righteous young prig. Now he became a generous, outgoing person, fired by a passionate desire to share his great discovery that salvation is not something we have to earn, but the free gift of a gracious God.

For the next 50 years, Wesley preached this good news throughout England. When the established Anglican churches closed their pulpits to him, he preached in marketplaces and open fields, often drawing crowds as large as 30,000 persons.

Wesley reluctantly broke with the Church of England and founded a new "Methodist Society" when the established church refused ordination to the corps of young preachers who helped Wesley with his fast-growing movement.

Methodism soon leaped the Atlantic to the American colonies. Wesley himself helped bring it here with a fruitful missionary visit to Georgia. On American soil, and particularly in frontier communities, Methodism thrived even more than it had in England. By the time of the American Revolution, there were 15,000 Methodists in America.

AFTER THE COLONIES gained their independence, American Methodists formed an autonomous denomination called the Methodist Episcopal Church. It was established in Baltimore in 1784. Its first bishop was Dr. Francis Asbury.

While Congregationalists and Episcopalians, who had been the powerful denominations of the colonial era, clung to the Eastern seaboard, Methodists set out to minister to the rough communities of the expanding frontier. Their itinerant "circuit rider" preachers covered enormous distances on horseback, conducting revival meetings, passing out Bibles, performing baptisms and marriages.

Reflecting Wesley's personal experience at Aldersgate, the early Methodists attached great importance to what they called a "felt experience of salvation." They believed every man should be able to recall the exact hour and moment when he knew himself to be saved through Christ.

This emphasis on conversion as a dramatic experience led to a highly emotional atmosphere at Methodist revival meetings. Methodist preachers worked the crowd up to fever pitch with pulpit-pounding fire-and-brimstone sermons.

The people of frontier communities found this approach to religion highly congenial, and the Methodist Church grew rapidly. By the time of the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln called Methodism "the largest and most important" religious body in America. He added it also was the "most typically American."

The latter description perhaps is still valid. But Methodists are now outnumbered in America by Roman Catholics and Baptists. The United Methodist Church, largest denomination of the Wesleyan family of churches, has about 10,350,000 members, and its membership in recent years has shown a tendency to decline rather than grow.

EVEN MORE DISTURBING to denomination leaders are the latest attendance figures. They indicate only about a third of those nominally enrolled as members of the United Methodist Church actually attend worship services on a typical Sunday. And attendance figures, like total membership, are in a downtrend.

In common with many other Protestant faith groups, Methodism was afflicted, in its early years particularly, by a tendency to fragmentation. Any group that differed with the majority on a point of doctrine — however obscure it may seem today — simply went off and formed a separate denomination. As a result, there are today 21 different Methodist denominations in the United States.

Three of them — The African Episcopal Church, the African Methodist Episcopol Zion Church, and the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church — are predominantly black in membership. Together they have about 2.5 million members. They have been talking of merger, but so far nothing concrete has come of it.

The other Methodist bodies are small, ranging in size from the Free Methodist Church with 55,000 members to the Cumberland Methodist Church with fewer than 100. Most of the smaller Methodist bodies are fundamentalist in doctrine, upholding the "literal inerrancy" of the Bible.

Snake-handlers, poison-eaters take the Bible out of context

Snake-handling, a "religious practice" which still survives among some small Protestant sects in the Appalachian Mountains, is a classic example of the dangers of reading the Bible out of context.

People who pick up rattlesnakes or drink poisons as a demonstration of their faith justify these acts by citing a promise of Jesus recorded in Chapter 16, Verse 18 of the Gospel according to Mark.

The scriptural passage says of devout Christian believers:

"They will be able to handle snakes with safety, and if they drink anything poisonous, it won't hurt them."

AT CARSON SPRINGS, Tenn., two leaders of the 100-member congregation of the Holiness Church of God in Jesus' Name died not long ago after drinking large doses of strychnine.

Their deaths distressed fellow-members of the congregation, but did not shake their faith. They had a ready explanation — already used by similar congregations in many cases of death from snake-bite:

The victims died because they didn't have enough faith in the biblical promise.

Another thesis suggests itself to biblical students who follow the fundamental rule of scriptural interpretation which holds that no passage ever should be read in isolation from the total context of the Bible.

Two of the New Testament gospels, Matthew and Luke, describe a series of temptations to which Jesus was subjected during a 40-day sojourn in the wilderness immediately prior to the beginning of his public ministry. The various temptations all had the same objective: They were means by which Jesus could do it the easy way, attracting attention to himself and his message through flashy signs and miracles.

The Doctor Says . . . by Dr. Lawrence Lamb

Testicle problem needs to be treated early in life

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am very much concerned about my brother's problem. When he was born his testicles didn't descend. At about the age of 11 he went to a doctor to begin treatment. If the shots weren't effective, of course, an operation should have been performed on him. It seems he never got the operation. Now he's a grown man. Can anything be done for him, or is it too late? Is it possible for him to have any kind of sex life? I don't know why my parents neglected this important situation.

Dear Reader — Undescended testicles should be treated in young boys before or at the onset of puberty. One or both testicles may be involved. If an undescended testicle is not brought down at this stage of life, and it is neglected until full maturity has been achieved, the testicle is usually not capable of producing live sperm cells. If one testicle is properly descended it can produce sperm, and such an individual will be able to father children. When neither testicle is descended before maturity is reached, then the man is almost always permanently sterile.

This does not mean that he will not be able to engage in sexual activity. The testicles have two main functions. One is to produce sperm cells, and the other is to produce sex hormones. The undescended testicles still produce testosterone and the individual involved can be just as masculine as any other man in all respects. He has the endocrine make-up for the normal amount of sex drive.

The testicles have to be located outside the body to produce suitable amounts of live sperm cells so that a man can father children. The control of the temperature of the testicles is essential to the man's fertility, but not to his production of male hormone.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have often wondered about the children of paraplegics, healthwise. After I read your article about paraplegics having children, I was prompted to ask a few questions. Wouldn't the cause of the paraplegia determine the health of the child? Could a disease cause this to be inherited, but obviously an accident would not? Then I was wondering, in particular, about polio. Is polio a disease that acn be inherited or not? If a woman had polio when she was about 25 years old and a few years later gave birth to a healthy child, would this girl be healthy and, if she has other children, is there a possibility of the polio being inherited?

Dear Reader — Many women who have had polio have normal children. Polio is a virus disease and, while it may damage the nervous system that affects the muscles particularly, once the disease is over, the individual cannot transmit it to anybody else. It's no longer contageous, and it is in no way an inherited disease. You should think of it in the same light as chicken pox, measles, and other virus disease which really are contagious diseases and not inherited diseases.

Paraplegics have damage to their spinal cord. This affects the movement and function of their muscles, and the location and amount of limitation depends on where the lesion is in the spinal cord, literally, how many nerve cells and which ones are affected. This is not the kind of problem that is inherited. I know of no instances of inherited or contagious paraplegic difficulties or any other difficulties that are transmitted by having such a problem

Doctors vary in rating acupuncture

NEW YORK (UPI) — A White House staff physician who accompanied President Nixon to China predicted that acupuncture "just could be the most significant medical rediscovery of modern times and Chinese herbal medicine may prove as important."

Speaking at the final scientific session of the American Medical Association's 122nd annual convention, Dr. William Lukash urged some 1,000 doctors and other medical personnel to see that there is more clinical research in the United States "to establish acupuncture's true worth before it is put into practice."

Lukash said his skepticism turned to "frank amazement when he witnessed major surgery, apparently done successfully on alert and smiling patients who had only needling to deaden the pain."

BUT ANOTHER speaker, Dr. James Y. P. Chen, a member of the acupuncture committee of the National Institute of Health, warned that the United States should go slow in adopting the medical art practiced in China for 7,000 years.

"There is much to be learned from Chinese medical practices before their achievements, particularly in acupuncture anesthesia, are made reproducible in Western countries," said Chen, of Santa Monica, Calif.

David M. Link of the federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) warned the physicians of "great potential for abuse" if acupuncture continues uncontrolled. The administration ordered last March that all acupuncture equipment be labeled to the effort that it can be used only by licensed medical practioners.

One speaker, Dr. Ronald Melsack, professor of psychology at McGill University, Montreal, challenged the contention that acupuncture does not hurt. He said patients did not want to admit pain and often said they felt "hot" instead.

A weekly series about your lawn and garden.

LAWN WEEDS SUCH AS dandelions and plantain are most easily and completely eliminated by spraying them directly with a weed-controlling solution. When sprayed the entire weed dies, whereas pulling weeds often leaves enough of the root behind for the plant to regenerate. Use a compressed air sprayer with a capacity of 1½ to 4 gallons to either spot-spray weeds or cover large areas of the lawn which may be weed-infested. The H. D. Hudson Manufacturing Company, makers of garden sprayers and dusters, recommends a fan nozzle be used to direct a flat spray pattern under low pressure right to the target.

Lawns improve quality of man's surroundings

Lawns, like other green vegetation, are essential for animal life. By trapping carbon dioxide from the air, utilizing water and minerals from the soil, absorbing power from sunlight for photosynthesis, the lawn not only builds food but releases oxygen which animals breathe.

No wonder the ancients recognized that "all flesh is grass"! The cycle repeats unendingly, continually freshening the air and recycling vital elements that make the land tolerable for humans.

But neither does man "live by bread alone!" The esthetic dividends that good lawns yield add to life's enjoyment. In a world increasingly crowded most men must look to their own home yard for the understanding of nature that wilderness once provided.

The groundswell of new varieties allows a homeowner to exercise creative landscaping with lawngrasses. The lawn very well may be the modern arena for exercise — be it tumbling with kids, working up a badminton sweat, or merely trotting around the property behind the mower. Whatever the relaxation, the lawn is your private game preserve.

A good lawn is a buffer against pollution, too. It absorbs dust, sound, and to an extent noxious gases. It "breathes" moisture in summer, cooling the surroundings many degrees below what the temperature would be over paving. In winter the lawn prevents the soil from freezing deeply. In spring it certainly keeps the mud out of the house compared to what would be the situation if only bare ground existed beyond the doorstep. And no doubt about it, a lawn increases property value, some say as much as 15 per cent.!

All in all, a nice lawn is a pretty good thing to have around the house in a civilized society. Paving or artificial carpets little satisfy either biological or esthetic needs which are part and parcel of a living lawn.

Indoor gardens supply year 'round enjoyment

There are many reasons why you might like to bring the garden indoors. It clearly reduces the work of gardening to a more manageable area, and also makes it easy to continue this pleasurable activity all year round.

Where to put your indoor garden? You may have a sunny room such as a porch that could be wholly converted to a conservatory.

Add glass walls lined with shelves full of potted plants, a dozen or more ferns in hanging baskets and perhaps some additional lighting fixtures. A humidifier would probably be a good investment too. Do get advice from a gardening professional as this may be more economical in the end.

Perhaps you'd like to build into your present living quarters a readymade hothouse. These can be purchased in various sizes and installed into almost any wall. Visualize one wall of the living room transformed into a blooming, multi-level garden, and you'll begin to see the decorating possibilities.

If yours is a do-it-yourself family, you can build a simple and relatively inexpensive "greenhouse" for any location in the house by installing some bulbs to encourage plant-growth inside ordinary bookshelves. (Grolux bulbs are fine for this purpose.)

A pair of these neon bulbs is usually required for each shelf of plants. They give off the exact range of light plants like best, and also give a jewel-like radiance to flower colors. Put a tiny herb garden in the kitchen, and a dazzling African violet garden in the bedroom.

As with other hobbies, indoor gardening will be more fun if you share it with friends. Persuade several friends to start their own indoor gardens, and you have the basis for a unique garden club. Not only can you exchange slips from particularly successful plants, but you can organize field trips to famous gardens in the area.

When your indoor gardens are overflowing, why not donate extra plants to a local convalescent home or children's hospital? Plan a plant-wrapping party. Ask everyone in the club to bring half a dozen surplus plants in plain clay pots. You provide some bright acrylic paint, scraps of felt and waterproof glue. Think how much cheer you'll be spreading!

Difficult plants to propogate

Some ornamental trees and shrubs are difficult or impossible to propagate by layers or cuttings. Among these plants are fir, pine, hemlock, locust, redcedar, mimosa, redbud, ginkgo, mountain-laurel, goldenrain-tree, blue spruce, myrica, and andromeda.

Sun-loving roses need six hours of exposure a day

Before you plant your first roses, the rose firm Jackson and Perkins advises two preliminary steps for best results: selection of a site and preparation

Roses are sun lovers, preferring at least six hours a day and preferring it in the morning and early afternoon. The exposure permits the plants to dry early, reducing the incidence of diseases that thrive under moist conditions. Roses don't require a full day's sun, however, and if they get afternoon shade it helps prevent bloom color fading on hot days.

Your site must have good drainage. Although roses like a lot of sun they dislike a lot of water and can actually "drown" if it does not drain from around the root system. Drainage can be checked by digging an 18-inch hole in the tentative location and filling it with water. If the water is gone within two hours, drainage is adequate.

In the bareroot stage, roses are not exactly beauteous. When they arrive you may wonder whether they will ever amount to anything. But don't despair, they will become large, bushy plants — a happy eventuality that must be anticipated when planning the site.

The amount of space required for each bush varies with the type of rose, the variety and your geographical location (warmer climates produce larger plants). For hybrid teas allow about two feet between plants in the colder areas and about three feet in the warmer climates.

For floribundas plan for 1½ to 2 feet spacing in the colder areas and about 2 to 2½ feet where it is warmer. Roses are versatile plants, however, and if space is limited they can be pruned to conform to less growing area. The drawback is that severe pruning will result in less flowers.

In addition to leaving space within the beds, don't plant your roses too close to shrubs or trees which can interfere with the roses' root systems and rob them of sun and nutrients.

Roses will grow in any soil that will sustain a lawn but superior results are more likely in a soil that is slightly acid, a condition usually found in soils naturally rich in organic matter. Roses will tolerate and even thrive in soil with a pH range of 5.5 to 8.5 (pH is a symbol used to express both acidity and alkalinity on a scale of 0 to 14; the neutral point is seven).

Lower figures indicate acidity, higher numbers denote alkalinity. Testing for pH is a simple matter; inexpensive kits are available at garden centers. Lime or marl is used to "sweeten" acid soils — raise the pH. Iron sulfate or ground sulfur will lower the pH — increase the acidity.

The Liberated Gardener

A SERIES BY Frank J. Taylor

When I first became a daffodil and tulip enthusiast I gardened by the book, spading the soil in the beds ten to twelve inches deep and burying the bulbs six to eight inches down in the earth. After the blossom show was over and the leaves had dried, I dug bulbs by the hundred, washed them in water spiked with pesticide-fungicide, dried them in the sun and stored them in a dark, cool place until time to replant in October.

"This is a lot of labor for three or four weeks of bloosoms," I complained.

"Yes, but it's worth it," rhapsodized The Flower Committee, "The first blossoms of Spring.

She didn't get down on her knees and plant bulbs and she didn't dig them, either. Another thing that bugged me was that, despite my careful husbandry, the bulbs became smaller each year, although much more numerous. I was lamenting this deterioration one day to a big bulb grower in Oregon.

"In your hot summers the bulbs mature too soon," he explained. "They don't have time to size up before they go dormant."

"Just how do I cope with that problem?" I asked.

"Two ways," he said. "Either buy new bulbs from me each fall, or leave your old ones in the ground and neglect them."

Right then I decided to try growing bulbs by neglect, the lazy and easy way. That fall instead of planting daffodils and tulips deep in the soil, where they'd have to fight their way up to sunlight, I rototilled a plot, made shallow trenches and pushed the bulbs into the soft soil with their noses barely covered by earth. (In cooler climates, of course, they would have to be pushed deeper for protection against freezing.)

Came Spring and the daffodils and tulips burst into bud almost a month ahead of schedule. We had a show of color before the neighbors' daffs were out of bud. That season, instead of digging and dividing bulbs, I left them in the ground. They jumped the gun on Spring and have done it year after year as they acclimated themselves.

Most of the daffodils came up in thick clumps and made full-size blossoms. The tulips, for some reason, became thinner. Some varieites winked out completely. I don't know why, unless it is because rodents relish tulip bulbs but seldom touch daffodils.

Intrigued by this experiment, I tried out the neglect technique with other bulbs. Lilies thrived on it, except for some hybrids that lacked vigor. Hyacinths increased in size and number, as did Dutch iris and gladiolas. Likewise, China lilies which now put up stems two feet tall.

Although I thought the bulbs might increase until they crowded themselves out of space, this didn't happen. Daffodils have a way of pulling themselves deeper each season. To compensate for the crowding, I give them at laast two good feedings a year of 8-8-8 pellets, in the late Fall and early Spring. That's all they ask of me — plenty of food and plenty of neglect.

Bare root stock requires different planting procedure

The steps in planting bare root material are slightly different from planting balled and burlapped plants.

Dig the hole deep enough and wide enough to house the roots without cramping.

If necessary, make the same provisions for drainage as with balled plants.

Then, in the center of the hole, where the trunk will rest, mound up four or five inches of topsoil, to serve as a support for the plant.

Before inserting the plant, prune off any ragged root ends.

Place the plant in the hole so that it is at the same depth as it was in the nursery.

Cover the roots with topsoil and pack it firmly. Follow with a layer of loose soil which nearly fills the hole. Then, fill with water and allow the loose soil to settle. Complete the planting with more loose soil, leaving a slight depression for future watering.

The final step in planting your bare root plant is pruning. One-third of the plant's smaller branches should be pruned back in order to compensate for the root loss due to digging.

The Liberated Gardener

A SERIES BY Frank J. Taylor

When I first became a daffodil and tulip enthusiast I gardened by the book, spading the soil in the beds ten to twelve inches deep and burying the bulbs six to eight inches down in the earth. After the blossom show was over and the leaves had dried, I dug bulbs by the hundred, washed them in water spiked with pesticide-fungicide, dried them in the sun and stored them in a dark, cool place until time to replant in October.

"This is a lot of labor for three or four weeks of bloosoms," I complained.

"Yes, but it's worth it," rhapsodized The Flower Committee, "The first blossoms of Spring.

She didn't get down on her knees and plant bulbs and she didn't dig them, either. Another thing that bugged me was that, despite my careful husbandry, the bulbs became smaller each year, although much more numerous. I was lamenting this deterioration one day to a big bulb grower in Oregon.

"In your hot summers the bulbs mature too soon," he explained. "They don't have time to size up before they go dormant."

"Just how do I cope with that problem?" I asked.

"Two ways," he said. "Either buy new bulbs from me each fall, or leave your old ones in the ground and neglect them."

Right then I decided to try growing bulbs by neglect, the lazy and easy way. That fall instead of planting daffodils and tulips deep in the soil, where they'd have to fight their way up to sunlight, I rototilled a plot, made shallow trenches and pushed the bulbs into the soft soil with their noses barely covered by earth. (In cooler climates, of course, they would have to be pushed deeper for protection against freezing.)

Came Spring and the daffodils and tulips burst into bud almost a month ahead of schedule. We had a show of color before the neighbors' daffs were out of bud. That season, instead of digging and dividing bulbs, I left them in the ground. They jumped the gun on Spring and have done it year after year as they acclimated themselves.

Most of the daffodils came up in thick clumps and made full-size blossoms. The tulips, for some reason, became thinner. Some varieites winked out completely. I don't know why, unless it is because rodents relish tulip bulbs but seldom touch daffodils.

Intrigued by this experiment, I tried out the neglect technique with other bulbs. Lilies thrived on it, except for some hybrids that lacked vigor. Hyacinths increased in size and number, as did Dutch iris and gladiolas. Likewise, China lilies which now put up stems two feet tall.

Although I thought the bulbs might increase until they crowded themselves out of space, this didn't happen. Daffodils have a way of pulling themselves deeper each season. To compensate for the crowding, I give them at laast two good feedings a year of 8-8-8 pellets, in the late Fall and early Spring. That's all they ask of me — plenty of food and plenty of neglect.

Bare root stock requires different planting procedure

The steps in planting bare root material are slightly different from planting balled and burlapped plants.

Dig the hole deep enough and wide enough to house the roots without cramping.

If necessary, make the same provisions for drainage as with balled plants.

Then, in the center of the hole, where the trunk will rest, mound up four or five inches of topsoil, to serve as a support for the plant.

Before inserting the plant, prune off any ragged root ends.

Place the plant in the hole so that it is at the same depth as it was in the nursery.

Cover the roots with topsoil and pack it firmly. Follow with a layer of loose soil which nearly fills the hole. Then, fill with water and allow the loose soil to settle. Complete the planting with more loose soil, leaving a slight depression for future watering.

The final step in planting your bare root plant is pruning. One-third of the plant's smaller branches should be pruned back in order to compensate for the root loss due to digging.

Summer tree maintenance includes pruning, thinning

The hot summer days of June, July and August are the times when homeowners can really appreciate the cooling shade and beauty of the trees on their property. In return for this bountiful gift of nature, homeowners should remember that they owe their trees a summer measure of maintenance to help insure their health.

According to T. A. Baer, Vice President of the Davey Tree Company, pruning is one of the most important tree services available to homeowners who want to preserve their beautiful trees.

Beauty isn't the only reason pruning is important. Decay that starts in dead branches is a major cause of tree loss. This decay can work its way into sound wood of large branches and finally into the main trunks. When that happens, these trunks often become hollowed out, weak and dangerous. This decayed wood also attracts insects and tree diseases which can cause premature loss of valuable shade trees.

Besides pruning for beauty and health, thinning of inside branches will let sunlight filter through to the ground to promote better lawn growth, and thinning can lessen the wind resistance of trees which makes them less subject to damage by high winds, a serious problem in some areas already this year. The pruning of storm-shattered or broken branches should be done promptly to lessen the danger of injury or damage to people or property below.

Also, reducing the size of a tree by cutting back some branches and removing others decreases the drain on a damaged or starved root system. This trimming helps re-establish a better balance between the roots and top while other steps such as feeding or spraying are taken to bring the tree back to full vigor.

Most people who own large shade trees are not inclined to attempt pruning in high branches. That kind of climbing is best left to professional tree men who have training, experience, the right kind of equipment and are properly insured.

Small trees can usually be pruned by the homeowner, but care should be taken to see that the cuts are made properly. "Larger limbs to be removed should be undercut away from the trunk," says the Davey man. A second or top cut is then made to remove the limb cleanly and avoid stripping the bark down the trunk.

The final cut can then easily be made to remove the stub. This cut should be flush with the trunk. The wound should then be painted with a good tree paint to aid healing and protect against the entrance of decay.

PRUNING IN tall trees requires experience, training and the right tools. Tree care men use safety ropes to help them reach all parts of the tree.

Use coffee cans when sprinkling

The right amount of water — when it is needed — is much better for your lawn than too much water or too little . . . and can probably save money on utility bills. Proper watering may vary slightly with the different types of grass, but two measuring methods suggested by the American Association of Nurserymen will be helpful.

When you water, apply the equivalent of one to two inches of rainfall. That means you soak the lawn — not just sprinkle. How can you tell when you have equal to two inches of rain? Put straight-sided coffee cans around the lawn at several different spots. When they have accumulated one or two inches of water in them, you know your lawn has enough water for several days of dry weather.
